Foreword

THE slanting silver veil of memories which divides yesterday and today is lightly brushed aside and, with the power of retrospection, the history of what has preceded, together with the achievements of the past and the persistent efforts of the present, is reviewed by those whose sympathetic chords of fellowship respond to a worthy cause.

In this, THE 1927 HOWLER, we endeavor to portray to the mind's eye such pictures of Wake Forest as will enable one to see in it a steady progression upward and a continued forward reach.

Between its covers are mirrored the incidents of yesterday, scenes of today, and prophecies of tomorrow which may lend ideal colors to the canvas of art's genius. If memory is not dulled by the passage of Time, and fond thoughts of happy days and inspirations of nobler ends are awakened, then our efforts have not been entirely futile. With this purpose in view, we submit

JUST ninety-three years ago, in the spring of 1834, a northern correspondent wrote to a religious journal a gloomy letter of facts regarding the moral condition of North Carolina. One thing he found was hopeful: "They have kindled," says he, "a light in the Wake Forest Institute that I know will shed its beams over the whole State." That was the lesser Wake Forest; the greater Wake Forest is dimly visualized for the future; but between these covers is mirrored the Wake Forest of today, a testimony, that the prophecy has been fulfilled.

*"Thou hast like a rock-built refuge stood

"A little learning is a dangerous thing; Drink deep or taste not of the Pierian spring."

*"And here declining manhood learns to note the sly
And sure encroachments of infirmity."*

*"Majestic casements opening on the foam
Of perilous seas in a midnight land forlorn."*

"Traveller, what lies over the hill?"

"And ivy walls grow venerable, on which dull Time Feeds, like slow fire upon a hoary brand."

*"Where Pan might summer-long pipe his delight
And fairies dance their rounds each full-mooned night."*

THE above is a picture of the residence of Dr. Calvin Jones from whom was purchased the farm of six hundred and fifteen acres for Wake Forest Institute. It originally stood where the Administration Building now stands. After several removals it now occupies a place across Wingate Street to the west of the campus. Its porches have been somewhat modified and an addition made to the end. Otherwise the original building is well represented in the cut.

Classes

THE above is a sketch of the old carriage house in which Dr. Wait gathered his heterogeneous charge of twenty-five students on the first Monday of February, 1834, to begin class work with an opening prayer and lecture. The hoe and plow were not out of sight of the blackboard and desk, for manual labor on the farm was to begin on the same day with mental labor among the books.

SENIOR CLASS POEM

Four years ago we said. "Some day
We'll end our labors here—
 We'll pack our trunks
 Forsake our bunks
And leave without a care."

But now somehow we feel
It isn't sweet to go
 And leave the friends we've met—
 Friends we can ne'er forget—
And face the world "just so."

We hope our lives are full
Of truths that we have sought,
 And Alma Mater, may we ne'er
 Forget to breathe a word, a prayer
For all that thou hast wrought.

Alas, we go to face the world—
To know life quite anew—
 May our pleasant stay here
 Only brighten the career
Of each and make him true.

—POET.

The fact that "Professor" was made an instructor in the Modern Language Department after receiving his B.A. degree and was called this year to fill an instructor's place in the English Department, speaks for his scholarship. While he was making high grades and drinking deep of the Fœtan spring of knowledge, he always found time to make friends and to take part in college activities, thus gaining a widespread popularity among the students and professors.

ACTIVITIES: A.B. Wake Forest College, '25; Instructor in Spanish, '25-'26; Instructor in English, '26-'27; Director Class Baseball, '26; President Spanish Society, '26-'27.

"Lee" was an all-round student during his four years at Wake Forest, due to the fact that he was not a specialty for any one thing. He was active in Intra-Mural athletics, literary society, social activities on the campus, and exemplified a literary ability equal to the best. His abilities, sterling character, and winning personality assure us that real success is his.

ACTIVITIES: B.A. Wake Forest College, '24; Principal Peachland High School, '24-'27; Chairman Anson County Basketball Committee, '24-'27; Chairman Anson County Dramatic Committee, '26-'27; President Anson County Teachers' Association, '26-'27.

"Too low they build, who build beneath the stars."

Conscientious in all endeavors, aspiring to worthy heights, and accomplishing noble ends, "LEE" quietly wends his way among us. Nature seldom forms a more courteous gentleman or a more wonderfully gifted student. In modest phraseology we hesitatingly predict for "LEE" a future unalloyed with anything other than the good, the true, and the noble.

ACTIVITIES: Golden Bough; Charles E. Taylor Philosophy Club; B.A. Wake Forest, '25; Instructor in English, '25-'26.

"JIM" is the type of man that is bound to succeed in whatever he undertakes. Popular with all classes of students and well-liked by his professors, this young man has proven while here the old adage; that "nothing succeeds like success." "JIM" received his B.A. degree with the Class of '26 and is one of the four candidates for the M.A. this year. His captainship of Varsity Tennis for two consecutive years shows unusual honor in the field of athletics.

ACTIVITIES: Assistant in English, '27; Captain Tennis Team, '26-'27. B.A. Wake Forest, '26.

"Aby" is endowed with a personality that has won for him numerous friends throughout the student body. He is broad in his interests and has something to say for almost any occasion. He is one of those dependable fellows who makes his word as good as his bond. CLAUDE seems to have a very deep love for his chosen profession—law. In future years he may be able to sway his audiences with the eloquence of Webster or Hayne, or he may approach the great John Marshall in his legal interpretative powers, or he may be a small town lawyer, but in whatever field "Aby" invests his life, we are expecting him to make his mark.

ACTIVITIES: Vice-President Law Class.

He is studious, sincere, dependable, and friendly, and he is firm in resolution and conviction. His success in his chosen field is already assured. His stay with us leads us to say, "Society is his debtor."

"H. L." is a man of the highest type. Those who know him intimately will gladly testify to this. He is a true friend to many boys on Wake Forest campus. Busy is the term that describes him best, for he is always at work upon his tasks. ARNOLD has dedicated his life to the ministry of God's Word. We can but predict for this wide-awake young man a large field of service in the Master's vineyard. As he leaves the college he carries the best wishes of a host of friends.

"A friend in need is a friend indeed," is an old saying that seems to have been spoken for "Dock," for he is a man on whom you can always depend. By his friendly nature and intelligence he has crept into the depths of our hearts. "Dock" has chosen medicine as his life's work and we think that he has chosen rightly. He is one of the most consistent, hard-working students in the class, and with his earnestness, congeniality, and big-heartedness, we are sure he will make a splendid physician and prove an honor to his profession.

BAILEY came to us from Mars Hill in 1925, entering the Law School here as a Junior. While here he has won the admiration and respect of all. His inflexible character and magnanimous heart foretell his future usefulness. His knowledge of the law alone will cause his name to live forever in the minds of the members of his class. After he shall have passed from among us and engaged actively in his chosen profession, we predict that the legal knowledge of Webster, Clay, Calhoun, and Hughes will soon pass into oblivion. James will be swayed by his oratory, jurists instructed by his legal wisdom, and all men will crown him with the benediction of the ages, "A success."

BARNES is the kind of fellow whose friendship mellows with the years. The longer you have known him the better you appreciate him, and the longer you know him the longer you wish that you had known him. Upon first sight, BARNES seems to be the type of fellow that grows into the hard-fisted business man, but upon closer investigation, one sees that deep down in him there is a rich fountain of sentimentality which makes him yearn for the companionship of his opposite sex. This quality has not only attracted to him scores of those fairer ones, but a multitude of others no less human or sincere who wish him well in life.

Just speak the name "Book" and the campus occupants prick up their ears instantly, recognizing the sound as one of the most familiar appellations on the campus. He has been in direct contact with us for five years, taking his B.A. here last year. His frequent ambassadorial visits to the Court of "St. Meredithe's" foretell many things which may happen in the way of exchanging W. F. C. bonds for those of a more domestic nature. Where there doesn't seem o' bit."*

That spells BROWN. One has to know something of BROWN's nature to be able to appreciate him as he really deserves to be appreciated. He's never too busy to help a friend with his problem. No professor can ask him a question which he doesn't try to answer, and he is generally successful in his attempts. But when we see BROWN we always think of girls, girls, and more girls. He likes 'em, he loves 'em, and he falls for 'em. But we believe in sincerity in life's work and know that he will be a real success in the field of law.

A casual friend could hardly guess his best qualities, because they are too deeply ground to be detected immediately. His calmness and self-possession on all occasions are traits that all of us admire—and these he has. Underneath his reserve we know that he is every bit genuine. From the hilly and rolling West hailed FRANK, a very modest, reserved, and wise looking little fellow. The first two years of his college life was spent at State, but he could not realize his high and noble ambition there, and he came to Wake Forest to study medicine. State's loss was our gain. Beneath the dome of very black hair that he possesses lies an area of knowledge and comprehensive intellect which enables him to do one of the most desired things to read other people and not be read himself. Here is success, one, twice, yes, three for FRANK, and we know he will succeed.

"PROFESSOR" SULLIVAN believes in variety as the spice of life. And this is not restricted to his friends on the campus, nor to the objects of his affections, nor even to his interest and efforts in Physics and Chemistry. Perhaps it applies specifically to the variety of his "Subjects"—for he is a hypnotist of no mean ability. At first he was doubtful as to whether anyone would be a good "subject," but now he gives concrete evidence to any skeptics. Chemistry, Physics, Hypnotism, and wire walking—which field will he choose?

"JIM" has struck this vein that leads to greatness; he has gained knowledge and retained simplicity. These qualities have won him many friends, and among them is a retinue of girls who tousele their dizzy heads in dismay when his irresistible smile gladdens like a sunbeam and is lost. Sometime, however, "Greck will meet Greck" and "Jaw's" life will assume a dual aspect that will tint his success with the rich hue of pastoral matrimony. Until then, here's luck and an open sea!

Class History

THE time is appreciably less removed from this Incandescent Age than that antiquity-draped age that grows more mysterious as Father Time crunches the dry years between his gigantic molars, and blows the dust through his hoary whiskers that it may settle more thickly on the musty pages of history that has existed from that memorable time whereof the memory of man runneth not to the contrary, but it is historic nevertheless—historic because it produced the Class of '27.

A score years ago, more and less, a rivulet oozed from the intricate mosses of the unknown: trickled hesitantly over the ledges of the uneven strata of life; grew in volume as similar rivulets entwined, and finally swept down with the confidence and boisterousness of a mountain cascade—the Class of '27. This stream ambled and gamboled on its way, intoxicated with its freedom, until, in the fall of 1923, the oils descended and a semi-conquered deluge of freshmen lay lapping disconsolately and uncertainly around the legs of "Dr." Tom Jeffries, indispensable Potentate of Wake Forest College. The flood suddenly pressed the barrier for a year, but the Locks of Sophomorehood held, while the omnipotent and omnipresent wardens gazed superciliously down from the bulwarks.

Gazing upward in awe at these wardens, we, like sheep, were dumb before our shearers. They reminded us, with their diabolical serenades, of Pope:

*"Next where the sirens dwell you plow the seas;
Their song is death, and makes destruction please."*

This year of suspense and crisis was both incubator and brooder of an industrial revolution (with apologies to the other revolutions that were instigated). There was an increase in the production of chapel song books, a heavy offering of radiator fees, gym tickets and other "usual" necessities of college life. We invested heavily in chapel books, paid liberal radiator fees, and stocked up in interest in gym tickets. And why not? The purchase of chapel books is excusable on the principle of the thing—because of a gradually vanishing deference that a freshman feels toward idiosyncrasies inherited from home life. Radiator fees enhance the coziness of one's room and cause the young student to remain in by a sizzling radiator instead of wandering about on a hostile campus when night has wrapped her dismal blanket about it. As to the gym tickets, they became indispensable after the first "night out." We returned from this ennobling experience with the backs of the lower fronts of our shirts imitating the flowing beard of retreating winter. But at last (incomparable bliss!) the locks swung open, and we flowed out, like so many autumn leaves, on the expansive lake of complacent Sophomoreedom.

Being Sophomores is largely like the proverbial "morning after"—there isn't as much fun in the "being" as there is in the "arriving." We did not let our proteges discover the flaw in the Kohinoor of our existence, however, but extracted the usual special duties, together with a heavy ad valorem.

Our most fascinating task was the imparting of our "college spirit" into those innocent cherubs, our charges, the Class of '28. It was a difficult Commission of State, requiring the diplomacy of a skilled and sympathetic Cabinet of Compassion. In exercising our duty, we saw that every lung was inflamed before cheers failed in ardor; that at no time was any voice to rise the most minute fraction of an octave above our own, nor could a verbal shot at an enemy surpass a like child of our own wit without bringing down the wrath of an avenging Sophomore. Then, too, they were to be constantly sheltered from the wiles of any of the fair maidens who inhabit our campus all too infrequently. Our own orbs had not yet fully recovered from the continued drouth of vision of the mists that linger in a maiden's eyes and melt the heart of a wooer to words of translucent love.

Thus went our lives and our aspirations until, out of pure satiety, we became Juniors.

The Junior year is always epoch-making in college life. In it we put our hands to the plow and turned up furrow after furrow of wisdom until the fields of learning appear almost done. As we think that we have finished the last one, however, we reach the summit of the hill, and great uncultivated areas lie just beyond the rim of our ability. The year advances; a mania for "activities" develops to a white heat, and the thrilling art of politicking surges over the milder sports like hungry timber wolves in the chase. In fact, Junior life is one of activity and application; of widening circles of friendship; truer appreciation of our fellow students, and a time of practically complete oblivion to the goings-on of the outside world. It is really the collegiate year of the four—the smoothing shop in which the product is made ready to receive the polish and be allowed to bask in the sunshine of Senior glory.

When the Class of '27 awoke on Senior morning, the Blinds of Self-satisfaction were half opened, and we gazed through the Window of Realism into a world of Duty where Opportunity shone in all its myriad colors. We sat upright in our Beds of Contentment; threw back the Covers of Oblivion, and sprang up to gird ourselves in the Armor of Preparedness, for which we had struggled three years that we might merit our Arms.

The Senior's life is one of complex phases. Looking backward, there is a longing for those lost opportunities that cannot be redeemed, even at a price below par. Considering the present, we see a panorama of glittering Pearls of Great Price, and realize that we can take only a handful of these Gems of Study. We stand wavering before the harvest that lies before us: baffled by the equivalent values that make up the unattainable whole, and then stretch forth our hands and grasp, half blindly, the ones that appear nearer us. Possibly we shall be pleased when the years have tried our choice, but in the treading of the wine-press of life:

"There is a destiny that marks our ends; Rough how them how we will"

Standing preëminently above the other ideals toward which we have striven is that of Loyalty—a quality as intangible and indefinable as love, but whose compelling force surcharges the soul of every faithful member of the Class of '27. When we were fresh, the fluid of enthusiasm permeated us and we called it "pep;" as Sophomores, the restlessness of patriotic energy gripped us and we called it "college spirit;" while Juniors, we drank in thirsty gulps from the neglected cup of true appreciation, and called the resulting effect "joy of achievement." At last, when we had become Seniors, these three great qualities were blended by the master-hands of our tutors into the pyramid of determined and worthy ambition. May this Loyalty keep burning in the heart of each classmate of '27 the eternal fires of Faith, Hope, and Love, so that, when meeting each other at the intersections of Life's pathways, we may realize that immortal emotion that Bryant dreamed of when he wrote:

*"So live that when thy summons comes to join
The innumerable caravan, that moves
To the pale realms of shade, where each shall take
His chamber in the silent halls of death.
Thou go not, like the quarry slave at night
Scourged to his dungeon, but, sustained and soothed
By an unaltering trust, approach thy grave,
Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch
About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams."*

—HISTORIAN.

Class Prophecy

IT IS customary for the Class Prophet to consult someone who can unveil the future and foretell the destiny of each member of the Senior class. Being duly elected to the signal honor of Prophet of the Class of '27, I shall not deviate from the age-old custom: "What was good enough for our fathers is good enough for us." Accordingly I set about in my consultations.

First of all I seek the Muses. I remember that I have heard a great deal about their being the inspiration and salvation of many great writers. I beg, entreat, and implore each, but all in vain. Not a sound is heard, save the steam hissing from the radiator; surely that cannot be an answer to my imprecations. Suddenly one of them (I am not sure which one, but I think it was Thalia) whispered something in my ear. "What's that," I cried eagerly. She was gone. I remembered only one word, "Somnus." That is the guy I have been wanting to consult all the time. Here I stopped short. How was I to get in touch with him? Even "I" was baffled. However, my fears were short-lived, for I had an afternoon class. I fell asleep as usual on class and made my first call on old man Somnus. Immediately upon arriving at his kingdom I stated my business very briefly. Then came my first surprise—he introduced me to his son, Morpheus. Frankly I was surprised, for I had heard nothing about his son nor what he was supposed to do. Morpheus stepped to one side and motioned me to follow. I noticed as we went out that Morpheus picked up a kind of horn. As we walked, for we were going out through a beautiful garden, he turned the horn directly toward me. From the soniferous vapor which issued therefrom many things began to take place.

"Look," said Morpheus, "there is what you want to see."

The vapors seemed to curl in a peculiar manner until I made out the words: 1927 WAKE FOREST GRADUATES IN THE YEAR 1950.

Imagine my consternation when I saw a man whom I seemed to know acting as Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of North Carolina. Coming closer I saw that he was none other than C. C. Abernethy, who had worked along the road of the barrister until now he is enjoying his long-anticipated dream. Other men whom I have known are clearly seen. Yes, there is R. W. Albritton in the role of Associate Justice, while J. A. Bailey is Clerk of the Court.

But at this juncture the scene suddenly changes and I find myself in a little town of about 5,000 population. While walking down the street I see a sign: "Arnold & Grubbs." I walked into the store to find my old friends, "H. L." and "Bill," well established in a nifty department store. "Have you seen Brantley?" Grubbs asked of me. "No, where is he?" I returned. "Why, he is editor of the Zebulon Independent, and also town critic." Arnold volunteered. "He's quite the stuff around here now." Arnold went on, "and he's just finished a book on 'Philosophy and the Modern Woman'."

Now the territory seems familiar. I am back on the campus at Wake Forest. There comes an old man with white hair. The boys salute him as they pass. He proves to be Tom Baker. And there is Hal Bridges acting as Physical Educational Director. Blaney Rackley is head coach, but is operating a pressing club in connection with coaching. E. C. Ipock is the Freshman coach. C. W. Barbee is running a cafe in the old Joyner stand. "Yank" Dewein is

Dean of the Medical School and "Doc" Averitt is teaching pathology. H. G. Barnes has succeeded A. C. Reid, who retired last year. Brantley Booe now owns the Book Room exclusively, but is going to retire as a millionaire after this year. Looking about further I find that "Jete" Blackburn is Associate Professor in law and "Barney" Hallman is secretary to him. I also find R. P. Downey teaching in the Bible department, and preaching at Roseville twice a month.

The next scene is New York. The first man I see there is C. P. Britt, driving a bus despite his old age. D. D. Blanchard has developed into one of the most outstanding chiropractors in the city. R. H. Boone has recently accepted the position as sales manager in one of the big real estate firms. On the street I hear some noise which very faintly resembles music. Upon inquiry I find that it is I. O. Brady's six children who have developed their father's love and gift of music. J. W. Brown is a very successful lawyer in divorce cases. T. G. Britt is clerk in the Piggly Wiggly Stores, trying to support a wife.

The vapor seems to envelop me completely and different places whirl by me in rapid succession and I am able to see only a part of them. There is George Bryan at Clayton. He is a very successful barber. D. E. Buffalo is Special Gym Director at the University of Illinois. "Red" Cook is also there as Track Coach. At the same place is J. D. Vann, Jr., at the head of Modern Language Department.

H. E. Coppel is singing in Chicago in a famous Grand Opera. S. R. Byerly is stage manager and the two have a business which is nationally known. Playing in Chicago during the Grand Opera season is the famous "Carraway Folles," which is billed as the greatest show on earth since Zeigfeld died.

Rev. E. J. Caldwell is pastor of the Baltimore Church. A revival is going on at this time and J. L. Reid is conducting the music in an able manner. W. L. Creed has a very fine farm near Louisburg.

Soon after finishing college "Black Boy" Daniel went on a long sight-seeing trip and it was while he was away out West in Iowa that he met a pretty brown-eyed girl—O well, Walter still lives in Des Moines.

In the lobby of the Yarborough Hotel I saw Barney Walker talking to Hon. D. V. Walker, J. A. Harris, and Fred Hasty. After listening in for a few minutes without being noticed, I turned sadly away, vowing in my heart to never vote for another legislator.

Away out in Fort Scott, Kansas, "Monk" Ober and "Cowboy" Emmerson have given up their literary training altogether and have an excellent ranch. Fred is married, but "Monk" obstinately refuses to be bossed.

Doctors Patterson, Nance, and Parker have built one of the finest hospitals in the South at Pinehurst. The plans for the structure were drawn by Leon Spencer, one of the foremost architects of the age. The contractors were Tanner & Usry.

Another sudden flash and I see John Thomas Warren Davis, Jr.; I hardly know him; his hair is snowy white, and he is a little worried, but that old smile still spreads over his face. As pastor, John has served one church for twenty years. The collections are still good. Clipping from News and Observer: "Grandfather achieves world renown. S. J. Greene, Wake Forest man, swims the English Channel in 32 hours, 13 minutes and 6 seconds."

Professors C. H. Flanagan and A. W. Greene of Cornell, are away on leave of absence. Greene is in Berlin doing research work, while Flanagan is in England studying Shakespeare.

Jim Fleming has perfected a device whereby all the stars in the heavens may be grouped into one on such nights that the moon does not cast enough radiance. He has as salesmen A. M. Jackson, W. V. Howard, and C. R. Lewis; J. S. Pittard is plant manager.

Frank Furches, centerfielder for Boston, hit a home run, causing them to win the World Series from the Yankees, the first time in twenty years. Dr. R. S. Folger is club physician.

Dr. Chas. I. Gillespie, one of the most influential ministers of the South and professor in the Southern Theological Seminary, is to lecture in the new Memorial Hall at Wake Forest next Sunday.

It is the talk of the medical world now that Doctors D. H. Winston and W. A. Laughran have discovered a new drug that absolutely cures gout in nine days.

From Morehead City, which has developed into a great motion picture center, comes the news that D. S. Haworth has succeeded C. E. Poovey as Director of Movie Productions. "Red" came riding in on the crest of a popular wave. Old movie stars as R. T. Willis, Jr., M. C. Maddrey, L. K. Powell, and Chas. Vause were known to have used their influence in getting him elected to this position.

J. A. Hamilton is now at the head of the Baptist Orphanage at Thomasville. C. R. Hinton is editor of the Biblical Recorder. A. S. Holt is president of the Holt Motor Company. It is the only Ford agency in Durham County. A. C. Holloway is druggist in the old Wiggins Drug Store. This store has been operated for eleven years by J. O. Wells.

R. E. Wall and C. R. Tew have recently organized the Federated Debaters' Society, of which Tew is president. This club is composed of debaters from the various colleges in the United States who are interested in world affairs.

Doctors G. A. Gray and F. M. Killian are still working together at Houston, Texas. L. L. Gold and V. L. Hawes are prominent surgeons in the hospital in the same town. T. M. Watkins felt the call of Virginia hills and is now alleviating the ills of his fellowman at Crewe. B. G. Weathers is Professor of Anatomy at the new medical school at Duke University, with F. T. Bond and E. G. Epstien as colleagues in the same school. R. L. Waddell is actively engaged in research work on the head in the University of Berlin. W. L. Roberson, R. S. Robinson, and G. R. Stamps own one of the largest hospitals in the Middle West.

Professor V. T. Sullivan is astonishing the world by his feats of hypnotism in the field of abnormal psychology. Thanks to Mr. Sullivan, many brain disorders have been remedied by his peculiar power over men in the hypnotic stage.

B. E. Simmons has long since retired from active athletics. He is spending his last days at his quiet country home near Mooreshoro. Sports writers still look to him to pick All-American teams in baseball.

M. G. and T. J. Williams have finally ironed their brotherly difficulties and are again working together in the field of psychology. Both have contributed much to the world about the animal mind, but their views have contrasted sharply on several occasions. At present, all is calm in the family.

In B. M. Squires is found a unique character. After graduation he could not decide what he wanted to do. He did not know whether to go into business, teach psychology, philosophy, and biology, or become a cartoonist. Piddling about in all these fields and doing nothing in particular, he finally decided to become a dentist. Then after four years as a dentist, he quit his profession and is at present writing a book called "The Successful Man."

A. B. Peacock followed up his love for pictures and only last week returned from South America and brought back a rare collection of pictures of many wild animals and birds. These will be used in his lecture, "The Relation of Man to Animals."

Banks Thomas and M. W. Meekins have been law partners for twenty years at Winston-Salem. A. D. Early is running a cigar store in Raleigh, while W. D. Early is in business at the old Athletic Supply Company. G. D. Taylor is Superintendent of Public Instruction in Georgia.

Charlie Matthews could never be induced to leave the farm even with flattering offers from several news syndicates. He is still a farmer.

Our President, Paul Sykes, is head Athletic Coach at the University of South Carolina. Paul married the summer before his Senior year at Wake Forest, and has apparently made forward strides in this line, since there has been practically no dissention in a few years.

J. Reid Key, after leaving this campus suddenly acquired a taste and talent for music. He finally settled at his old home in Rockingham and became manipulator of the bass drum sticks. He beats the sheeps skin furiously, too; even now I can hear the musical thuds reverberating, as he raps down on the drum.

Then suddenly I realized that it was not a drum at all, but my head and the professor was rapping me vigorously and protesting vehemently against anyone going to sleep on his class. Feeling rather abashed at my going to sleep, I halfheartedly made my way from the room. Then I decided that I must write down what had just been revealed to me. The remainder has merely been an every-day occurrence, such as writing the prophecy. With that, classmates, I beg to leave each of you to your fate and may that fate be kind to you.

—The Prophet.

Class Superlatives

The gentlemen of the Senior class filed out from their respective havens of work for their annual smoker on Tuesday night, March 1. The meeting was held in the dining hall of the Williams Club. The purpose of the class smoker was to bestow honor upon certain of its members, who had in one way or another, shown to be deserving of them. As in every other group of persons, the senior class of '27 contains men who seem to be peculiarly fitted to fulfill the duties of particular offices. The problem was to seek out these individuals.

The class was called to order by the president, P. G. Sykes, and nominations for the various honors were immediately in order. At once there were numerous members upon their feet placing their favorite candidate in nomination for the many glorious honors.

Evidences of several political machines were at once revealed. Some of them running smoothly with the speed of Mercury over the magnificent horizon manned by pilots of no mean skill and accuracy in manipulating the gears, speed, and direction, while some showed signs of immature development and were not so successful in crowning their favorite sons with the desired honors. Machine politics continued throughout the elections and most of the places were hotly contested.

Nominations for "Standing Broad Grin" were first entertained. Many candidates were placed on the ballot, but after careful scrutiny of each nominee, L. K. Powell was conceded to be the most naturally logical man for the possession of this honor.

Every class has its "Rule Buster"—perhaps it would be more proper to say several "Rule Busters," and in this respect the class of '27 certainly must be well supplied because there were several men at once out before the group for this office. Joe W. Brown, who was declared by many to have broken every rule laid down by the authorities, finally emerged winner. At the same time, John Holoman, due to his long standing popularity as a graceful dancer, was named the best in that art.

The election machines began working more efficiently, and P. G. Sykes being the most married man of the class was easily elected the "Most Unshackled." R. G. Weathers was chosen the possessor of the "Most Curly Locks." C. R. Tew, who was declared to be so dumb that they had to burn down the kindergarten to get him out of the nest grade, was named the "Most Dumbfounded."

The class paused to concentrate for a while, but before much thinking could be done, someone had put the name of R. L. Waddell before the group as the logical man of the Senior Medical Class to bear the distinction of being the best "Punk-hall Promoter." Before the votes could be counted, one of the men arose and suggested that John Bailey's bow-ties should not be overlooked. The class fell for the suggestion and now Bailey has the honor of being the most "Bow-legged" man in the class of '27.

All agreed that it was too bad for T. J. Wilhams to have the position as the "Biggest Tobacco Spitter," but he deserved the place and justice had to be done.

Next, eyes were turned on the faces of every member of the class for the purpose of seeking out the "Best Looking" man in the hall. Several were simultaneously nominated for this much desired position. It was quite evident that electioneering had been running riot, and the hearts of the candidates were aflame with the fire of anticipation of victory. Tom Carraway survived the fight and his closest opponent, Bud Taylor, was rewarded by being placed in the "Rose Gallery."

We hate to tell it on H. E. Cripple, but he is the ugliest man in the class. Before harpies could be put on the election machine, Vic Sullivan, who is so strong that he once actually tried to send a night letter during an eclipse, was chosen the "Tight Wad" of the assembly. C. C. Abernathy was afraid that he would get the honor accorded to Sullivan, but the class felt that he more justly deserved another, which is "Skimme's Lover." Fred Hasty, said to have "logged" off every course he has passed, was easily named the "Faculty Favorite."

R. W. Albritton has never entered politics before this year but he need not become discouraged because he was elected the "Most Hopeless" in the class. In contrast to this, nominations for the "Most Promising" were yelled forth. S. R. Byerly won. B. C. Boor, being somewhat effeminate and wearing on this particular occasion a mustache which resembled the handlebars on a bicycle, was no doubt properly classified when he was named our "Bearded Lady."

Of course we hate to admit that there are men in our class who excel in gambling as well as those who excel in more noble fields, but such being true, we felt it our duty to recognize the best material in each line. S. T. Lamm was "dubbed" as "Full House" and C. B. Vause finally emerged as the "Best Crap Shooter."

J. D. Vann's dreamy countenance was commented upon by some of his fellow classmates. It was suggested that he be crowned as "Dream Daddy." The idea went over the heads of the group as a tent and Vann experienced no opposition. In like manner, H. C. Cook got the place of "Blushing Youth," while Holliday's eyes were recognized as the "Brightest."

Could you believe that there are some in our class who still persist in evading the Eighteenth Amendment? We are led to think there are because A. S. Holt was successful in his candidacy as the "Biggest Drunkard." Holt declared that he purchased all his corn from the class "Bootlegger" who is George Paschall. There were still some left who seemed to like their dram so immediately the "Whiskey Quartette" was selected. Much talent was present but the class showed its proficiency in judgment when it chose B. M. Squires, R. P. Downey, G. F. Johnson, and B. W. Walker to make up the quartette.

When we began looking for the "Most Adorable" all eyes at once focused on J. B. Ury. T. W. Davis thought he ought to have had the place and became very much enraged over his loss; he even offered to fight one who doubted his fitness and was thereby "dubbed" the "Most Pugnaacious." There was little opposition to C. L. Linn in his race for champion "Chapel Attender," although he had anticipated much because of the high record for chapel attendance that the class has.

Here the smoke grew denser and before it could be realized, C. R. Hinton was nominated the "Biggest Daredevil," and A. E. Peacock was unanimously chosen "Mamma's Darling." Of course, J. H. Naylor's campaign for the "Most Bullheaded" was successful. Likewise, C. E. Pooy was able to gather enough votes to be elected "Class Baby." Our "Bum" is none other than M. G. Williams and he fits the office like a bandage.

Some member arose and announced the "Most Romantic." There were many candidates presented for this honor. Every voter became a politician and all tricks of the trade were used to convert those who had no choice. Waldo D. Early won by one vote over T. W. Baker, who was later declared the "Most Passionate Kisser" of the class. R. G. O'Brien was declared the "Most Loose-tongued" because he emphatically told the group that his room-mate, J. D. Vann, actually carries a club to keep the "fair sex" from smothering him. Of course it is as useless as a tire pump in a canoe to say that Vann is the "Biggest Snek." W. L. Creel, not being so successful with the ladies, justly deserves the place as "Woman Hater."

R. H. Boone was nominated for "Baby Face," but before the votes were cast, B. W. Walker, not knowing anything about parliamentary procedure, presented J. A. Hamilton as the "Biggest Cusser." Boone and Hamilton paled up overwhelming majorities while Walker was unanimously chosen "Bone-head." The president announced "Hair-cutter." Over a dozen men leaped up. Evidently a political ring had been organized for they all yelled, "Give us Tew." After the tumult had died away, Tew was declared elected.

Next, eyes turned on the stately posture and conservative dress of J. O. Wells. He was easily classified as the "Most Dignified." No one denies that L. P. Spencer is by rights the "Mocking Bird" of the class. If one should have any doubts as to his qualifications just drop around and hear his melodious voice. B. G. Rackley's miserable record in athletics clearly shows that he was the proper man to be named our clumsiest member.

Practically every man of the class is guilty of lying, but it is also true that some lie more than others, and D. S. Haworth was agreed upon as being the most lavish indulger in this sin. The class, though, can boast of one real George Washington in its midst. He is I. O. Brady, the "Most Truthful." Then there are some who don't exactly lie outright but sling a line of what we know as "Royal Bovine." D. E. Buffaloe, our "Biggest Bull-shooter" excels in this field.

Every one agreed that J. S. Pittard was the "Briest Eater" of the group. It would have been useless to have run anyone against him. An oversight caused the laziest member to be overlooked until now. Several names were placed before the house and every candidate was afraid he would win. There were no political machines playing in favor of anyone. The halloing being concluded, the group became so still you could hear the microbes gnashing their teeth. L. B. Paschall, editor of the college paper, won by a small majority. W. M. Grubbs was named the strongest while M. M. Pittard, by actual measurement with all contestants, succeeded in convincing his fellow classmates that his feet were larger than any other man's present.

At this point the various machines seemed to have exhausted their fuel because it was without opposition that B. M. Squires and R. P. Downey won the remaining two places to be filled. They were, respectively, the "Most Virtuous," and the "Most Debauched."

With these offices so capably filled and all cigars by this time being converted into ashes, the class showed its appreciation to Miss Williams for the use of her hall by a rising vote of thanks and adjourned with the job that they had finished.

Class Testament

WAKE COUNTY,
STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA. } ss.

WE, the Class of 1927 of Wake Forest College, claiming full health of body and mind and believing ourselves absolutely capable of making provision for the future disposition of all our worldly belongings—while fearing that our sudden plunge into a realm where there are no profits to leg and no Dean to excuse us—may damage beyond capability or mental processes—do seize the passing moment to leave the charges in the hands of trustworthy executors hereinafter named:

Feeling that our decease will be the source of heartrending grief to our multitudinous friends, we do hereby request the said executors to procure sufficient priests and speakases to console said grieving friends.

It is our wish that all expenses incurred through our burial services be met by the sum total of our insurance policies, moneys earned during the summer by the sale of Bibles and cook books, all our overpaid accounts, bum checks, and refunds from the Barsar.

Our beloved parents shall be the recipients of our heartfelt congratulations that they are at last rid of a troublesome proposition; one which has been the cause for many an hour's grave solicitation and many an output of cold cash—for which unselfish co-operation and needful domination do we on this day arrange for a conscientious endeavor to so shape our hereafter that it will cause their old age to be a period of joy and contentment.

To Dr. William Louis Puteat, who is our beloved classmate by virtue of his contemporaneous resignation, we extend our love and appreciation for his long and useful service and especially that part which we ourselves have fortunately partaken; to his successor we pledge our faithfulness and unwavering support.

Those of us who are doctors-in-the-making bequeath to the Junior Meds the right to the highly entertaining pastime of taving the incoming Juniors how lucky they are not to have taken Anatomy under certain professors, etc., ad infinitum.

We of the Ministry leave word with neophyte preachers that gospel spreading ain't what it used to be; on account of which fact a course or two under Phil wouldn't be amiss, considering that bricklaying and tarning play havoc with weak backs and tender hands.

The teachers of our number pass on wholeheartedly to the budding teachers of Junior Class the pains of anxiety and embracing fear that beset us when we deliberated on acquiring a position for next year.

The omniscient Sophs are the possessors of our unserved commission to lay aside their pestering ways and become sensible, law-abiding citizens; all their transgressions upon Freshman territory are cheerfully forgiven, knowing as we do that they came out of well-meant ignorance.

To all who may come after, we offer congratulations tinged with envy and resentment that they will be able to enjoy a decent theater and postoffice—possibly a gymnasium and swimming pool—luxuries which were denied us during our stay in this earthly realm of material obstacles.

By process of elimination our attorney narrows our residue of possession to one last item: this our eternal friendship. We will, devise, and bequeath to our cherished faculty who have never misused an opportunity to flunk us—but who stand shoulder to shoulder with us in saying that the name of our Alma Mater is the farrest in all the land.

We do hereby appoint and constitute the Mayor and Chief of Police to execute this our Last Will and Testament.

In testimony whereof we, the Class of 1927, have, to this our Last Will and Testament, set our hands and seal this, the second day of June, Anno Domini One Thousand Nine Hundred Twenty-Seven, hereby revoking and making null and void all other wills made heretofore by us.

JUNIOR CLASS POEM

The Junior Sun is sinking—
Its last efforts tint the West—
The mellow glow of Eventide
Brings a promised rest.

Three Creative Days are done—
With acceptance and rejection
We would now purge the handiwork
With a moment's quiet reflection.

In the Freshman Day we rejected much
That bound us with its fetters;
As Sophomores, we began to build,
And centre with learning's tethers.

In the Junior Day we built again,
And Character adorned the work—
Brought wisdom to the diligent,
And left behind the Shirk.

Now, while the Day is dying,
We look toward the Dawn,
When Senior Guides will lead our feet
To our places 'mid the Throng.

THE POET.

JUNIOR CLASS HISTORY

THE infancy of the Class of '28 was marked with the usual degree of "greenness" which has been characteristic of all preceding Freshmen classes. Many of the newcomers were eager to learn and obey college rules, while some had to learn the alphabet again in a very different way. Many had to learn the meaning of being away from home and from parental care, for they had always been clinging "to mama's apron strings," while others tried to be a bugwig, but only a few of the latter interested our little group.

The Sophomores treated us royally, giving us the honor of being very conspicuous on the campus and streets. The "shorttail parade" was the next thing on the program, and those keen-eyed Sophomores found us where even a telescope could not locate us. After this celebration, in which many took more than an active part, our tribe began to think it best to remain in our rooms at night instead of exposing our magnificent heads to a very horrible and non-licensed barber.

The class soon began to enter politics. Everyone took an active part in this important matter, because the President of the Student Body had read the rules and they must be obeyed, and in order to do so there must be an influential leader. After much politicking and voting, D. M. Clemmons was elected President. We felt that he was able to guide our ship through the year. When the football season closed, it was found that the Class of '28 had made a very creditable record. Christmas holidays passed and the on-rushing examinations made us forget the joys of the holidays, but we did pause in these hours of rush to elect Miss Ruth Dunning as our sponsor. The examinations came and many thought of jacking trucks to return home, but not so the little tribe remained to fight on. Spring, the budding trees, and the green grass gave us new life. Freshman baseball ended with excellent results, the class having won State Championship. Thus, the first year closed and wishes extended to all for a happy summer vacation.

We returned to our Alma Mater in the fall of 1925, pondering in our minds, with the help of our able President, G. N. Ashley, how we would direct the other bunch of "Newbs" through their first year. Of course, the little of the first few nights was had in a most friendly manner, to express, as it seems, our importance. But soon the "Old Ship '28" reached quiet seas and with a smooth south wind, sailed on with the pointer of the compass fixed on the end of a Senior year. Miss Virginia Gay was unanimously elected sponsor for the class. Although many of our number were missing, their places were filled where duty demanded it. The "Stonewall Eleven" was spotted with men from our ranks who, in a few months, gained gridiron fame. There were athletes of all kinds who decked themselves with honor in other dominant sports in the college. The class has furnished many distinguished debaters and orators; it also possesses many "song-bards," who help to keep up a lively spirit among the students. The Glee Club selected a number from our midst and our class was also honored by having one member chosen for the Golden Bough. We may not be the most brilliant class, the strongest, nor the best, but we are fighting for the right.

The class soon began to enter politics. Everyone took an active part in this important matter, because The Sophomore classes of Meredith and Wake Forest held a joint social which made such history for us as no other class possesses at present. These socials are to be every year between the Sophomore classes of the two colleges. This act of becoming more closely acquainted really tends toward progression.

Junior dignity crept in among us before the Sophomore year was at a close and thoughts of the coming year began to arrange themselves in a periodic way. The following officers were elected for the Junior class: O. K. Joyner, President; W. K. McDowell, Vice-President; R. E. Lee, Secretary; W. C. Whitley, Poet, and T. J. Stevenson, Historian. We are now Juniors in word, but in thought the road has seemed short. Joys and sorrows have come, but a greater sorrow in the death of one of our number—Leslie M. Humber. The summer vacation seemed to urge us to go onward, and many have obeyed. Some have entered the field of medicine and are doing work of credit, and others are preparing themselves in the many other branches of worthwhile work, not only to make a living, but a life. The passage of the Christmas holidays but increased our number, for many of the class brought their wives back with them. In the pages of life's history we hope surely to take our place and to add to the already good merits of our Alma Mater. While thinking of the college days that have passed, we proudly remember the words of Francis Marshall Morgan: "The dawn of another year" and we close the volume whose title page bears the legend "1926" and replace it upon the shelf. To each new volume we turn with eager, outstretched hands. If only we are allowed to linger over some passage . . . but all too soon another book is done and the year ended. Yet—friends, may its memories hold more of sunshine than of storm; more courage than faint-heartedness; may the faith seem lighter than you had thought and the Great Purpose of it all more steadfast and more sure.

Two years ago 'tis but a step
Back to the yester-year,
When Freshman joys, like stolen sweets,
Aroused a dreadful fear.

At last the gauntlet was complete
And we were Sophomores.
Ah! Pent up vengeance, you were sweet,
The campus echoed our roars.

We've sung our songs; yelled like mad
Through sunshine, dark, and wet,
And have tried in every tender way
To show the Frosh our pep.

But play alone will not make men
Of thought, work, and learning,
So we lay a wreath to the Sophomores,
As to Juniors we are turning.

SOPHOMORE CLASS HISTORY

"COLLEGIATE, collegiate, sure we are collegiates," sang a full score of vigorous youths as they sprang from the train upon returning to Wake Forest after the nineteen twenty-six summer vacation. Of this number, Sophomores were in the majority and it was from their throats that the above snatch of song issued more obstreperously. These exuberant lads were simply full to overflowing with an almost uncontrollable effervescence of ecstacy, and their conversation and humorous comment leapt so swiftly from their clamorous tongues that the result was a discordant conglomeration of ventriloquial verbosity.

Ah! but how totally different was the mien of the Freshman class (of which the above mentioned lads were a part) only one year before. Then we were shy, fearful, and furtive as we descended from the various trains. But as the year progressed we gained in confidence—so much, in fact, that the climax came almost in the shape of a disaster. It is of this that I wish to speak for a moment, giving in a few sentences some idea of the attitude which prompted the class of '29 to plan the Freshman Smoker of 1926.

The class of '29 was perfectly cognizant during its Freshman year of the belligerent and antagonistic feeling which prevailed in the hearts of Wake Forest upperclassmen toward Freshmen in general, and it was with the sole purpose of creating a spirit of brotherly good will among ourselves that we had this smoker. That, however, was merely part of our purpose. We aimed, by creating a friendly spirit among ourselves and toward the college, to thus in some part earn the reciprocating friendship of the upperclassmen, for we held as the fundamental principle of our behavior the time-honored song of the Angels, "Peace on the earth, good will toward men." It was because of a total and absolute misunderstanding of our object on the part of the upperclassmen that our project, to all outward appearances, failed. But has it failed? Perhaps, yes, as far as we, the Freshman class, were concerned. But look into the future for a moment. It is not in the least impossible, and not at all improbable that the Freshman classes of the coming years will be treated with the civility due fellow human beings, instead of the curt superiority which we usually assume toward our brethren of the South, who originated in Africa; all because of the earnest effort of the class of '29 to create a spirit of peace and harmony.

Much was the abuse that we received after that affair in 1926, and one writer contemptuously and sarcastically dubbed us as "The Great Class of '29." But we took our medicine bravely, remembering that Columbus failed in his attempt to discover a short route to India (a seeming failure which, however, culminated in undreamed of good fortune) and that we, also, will live to see our failure turned into glorious success. Let it be put on record that the class of '29 suffered momentary defeat, during its Freshman year, that the succeeding Freshman classes might enjoy life at Wake Forest College as becomes the station of free, white American citizens!

An attempt to chronicle all the activities of the several members of the Sophomore class would be literally impossible, and consequently we must content ourselves with a mere mention of the officers, for after all, it is they who shape the destiny of the class as a whole. During the Freshman year (1925-1926) A. A. Lennon was President, C. A. Upchurch was Vice-President, and W. D. Holoman was Secretary. It was C. B. Nalle's lot to write the class poem, which he did very creditably. This year (1926-1927) T. V. Hackney, an athlete of whom the class has reason to be proud, is occupying the office of President. R. M. Fales and E. A. MacMillan are Vice-President and Secretary, respectively, while C. H. Haskett is class poet, the capability of whom is evidenced by the metrical composition which accompanies this article.

There are other Sophomores who deserve some comment. Among these being J. P. Piffer, who is notably representing the class as a member of the Student Council; Dallas Holoman, who is very ably holding the position of Assistant Business Manager on the Wake Forest Student staff; and E. A. MacMillan, who, beyond being an officer of the class, is Sports Editor on the Old Gold and Black staff, Sophomore Editor on the Howler staff, and has acquired noteworthy success and attention as a news-writer. In addition to these there are many others in the various and sundry branches of academic, athletic, and literary endeavor, the mention of whom is forbidden because of lack of time and space.

The writer, at this juncture, is compelled to call attention to the fact that at least five members of the nineteen twenty-seven basketball squad are Sophomores, and that the men who represented the class on the past season's football squad were numerous.

In conclusion it may be truthfully said that nowhere will there be found more loyal, more faithful, and more devoted sons of dear old Wake Forest than the members of the "Great Class of '29," and we hereby pledge an undying support to our Alma Mater, that she may continue to shine in a resplendent halo of effulgent light.

FRESHMAN CLASS POEM

We Freshmen are a funny lot
 When one considers us;
 And whether we are men or not
 We make a lot of fuss.

The "Noph" may sing and holler, too,
 But what care we for that,
 When we can run at ev'ry "shoo!"
 And curse the blooming rat?

We wear our caps of Black and Gold,
 And, proud of this small "F,"
 We let the world in awe behold
 The emblem on our clif.

If we are foolish, wise, or fresh,
 They know who tease us most;
 For they once felt the stinging lash,
 Back to the same old post.

So "F"ellows, let's take courage now
 And do our very best
 To win a laurel for our brow
 When we shall pass the test.

The greenest grass that ever grew
 In spring's celestial air,
 When wet with sparkling dew
 Is of all crop most fair.

So "fresh" in life's own spring are we,
 With green, aspiring minds,
 Which may, ere we shall winter see,
 Place us among rich finds.

For which our college has won fame,
 Thus adding glory to her name.
 —POET.

FRESHMAN CLASS HISTORY

GOOD EVENING, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN! THIS IS STATION W. F. C. BROADCASTING. THE NEXT NUMBER ON OUR PROGRAM IS A BRIEF SUMMARY OF THE ACTIVITIES OF THE FRESHMAN CLASS SINCE ITS FIRST APPEARANCE THIS YEAR.

On September 14 and 15, 1926, the campus of Wake Forest College began to be again overrun by a group of about seven hundred and fifty boys. Of this number, one hundred and fifty were "Newishes," that is, they were starting into college for the first time. The men in this group were from all parts of the country, and as a whole, were a very "green" and homesick bunch of boys for a week or so.

The first problem we encountered upon our arrival on the campus was that of registering properly. Of course, the whole scheme was new to us, and therefore seemed very strange. However, we finally finished and then began to have a more complacent feeling.

For about a week the upper classmen tried to find out all they could about us. One night they even tried to find out whether or not we were well trained in the art of walking about in a group, kept together by the watchfulness of some of their number. We must have done well, for no other attempts were made along that line.

One day not long after the opening of the semester, the announcement was made in chapel that there was to be a mass meeting of the student body that night for the purpose of learning a few yells and songs. All Freshmen were urged to be present. This was our first encounter with the rest of the student body when it was feeling in high spirits. In the course of this meeting, several of our number were called upon to demonstrate their ability as public speakers. They acquitted themselves very well. When the meeting was over, the upper classmen, who had, for the most part, occupied the rear of the building, rushed out and lined up to watch us come out. We did so with fear and trembling and hastened to obey the nerve-racking shout: "Get in your h-o-l-e, Newish!"

Close upon this harrowing experience came the first big football game of the season. We attended this in a body and saw our team win over Carolina in a hard fought game. This was the first chance to show our college spirit, and we responded heartily with the result that the majority of us could not talk much after the game was over.

Not long after this the President of the Student Body called a meeting of the Freshman class for the purpose of electing officers. The following were chosen: Winston Hiner, President; Carl Danner, Vice-President; and John Hendrix, Secretary. These men were elected with their honesty and integrity in view, and they have proved to be very good selections.

One day along towards the latter part of the first semester, the weather man "framed up" with the upper classmen and covered the ground with snow. In chapel, a brief meeting of the Freshman class was announced for after chapel. When the meeting was over we looked out the windows and saw a line of upper classmen standing outside, with snowballs piled beside them, waiting to give us a reception. We decided that we were in no hurry at all to get to dinner and that if we waited a little while, the food would probably taste better. At any rate, after waiting inside the building for a short while, we saw the men outside beginning to leave. Before long we were able to venture out and go to dinner.

The next test of our ability came with the first semester examinations. They loomed up before us as something wholly impossible to survive. But after working hard, we tried them and passed for the most part. The class as a whole made a very creditable showing.

Freshmen have been well represented in all forms of athletics. We had a very creditable football team, and a hard-fighting group of basketball players. Although they were not always successful, there was always plenty of spirit. The present prospects for the Freshman baseball team are very good, and it is expected that this team will be the best we have had.

During all these experiences, the members of our class have been gaining every day in college spirit. We have become more and more loyal to Wake Forest, and have begun to feel that we are really a part of the Student Body. The brotherly attitude of the upper classmen has increased constantly and we have come to know and like them.

However, as our Freshman year has drawn to a close, there has been one chief regret in our minds. This one reason makes us wish that we might retrace our steps and go through the year again, but this is, of course, impossible; it will be a source of sorrow to us that we cannot continue our college course under the leadership of Dr. William Louis Potat.

THE LAW CLASS

LAW CLASS HISTORY

THE history of the Law School at Wake Forest ever since its beginning in 1895 has been a record of glory punctuated with many numerous achievements. But it is the year just ended that has eclipsed all others in a way which seems nothing less than phenomenal. Never before has a law class at Wake Forest possessed such a record of accomplishments as is claimed by the present class.

It was shortly after the opening of school this year that the annex to the Library, which was to be occupied by the Law School, was finished. The completion of the annex, an equivalent to a small new building, meant that for the first time the Department of Law at Wake Forest College was to be adequately housed and that a real law library was to be installed. The equipment of a very much larger library and the hiring of a licensed attorney as a full time law librarian marked the beginning of a new era for the Wake Forest Law School. Wake Forest now has all the requirements necessary in order to be ranked as an A-1 law school by the American Bar Association. When Wake Forest is so listed, it will be ranking with the very highest law schools in the country.

Near the close of last year and after the 1926 HOWLER went to press, the law students launched a campaign among its members and friends for a fund to have the portrait of Dr. N. Y. Gulley, beloved grey-haired founder and dean of the School, painted by a well-known Russian artist then traveling in America. This fund was soon raised, and now a portrait of the man that has prepared and trained more lawyers for the bar than any other man in North Carolina hangs in Wingate Memorial Hall.

The enrollment this year of a hundred and ninety is the largest class yet to read law at Wake Forest. The completion of the annex caused men to flock to Wake Forest from practically every county in the State, from the highest peaks of the Blue Ridge to the lowest depths of the swampy east have come men to study law. Forty-three men went up from Wake Forest in January to take the Supreme Court examination, the largest ever to go up in January.

The Wake Forest Law School ever since its establishment thirty two years ago has ranked among the highest in efficiency. The credit for this position is attributed solely to our worthy law faculty, headed by our beloved Dr. Needham Y. Gulley, who has labored with strain and effort for the success of the school ever since its foundation. He is very efficiently supported by Professors E. W. Timberlake, Jr., and R. B. White, whose ability as teachers of the law has won for them recognition throughout the State. Over twelve hundred lawyers in all have come out from the halls of Wake Forest to practice the high profession, a number unsurpassed by any other law school in North Carolina.

The Law Class of 1926-27 has not only been active in the field of law, but also in every other phase of college life. In every phase of college activity, the members of this unit have been in the front ranks. Whether on the athletic field, in the class room, society hall, B. Y. P. U., glee club, or on the debating teams and college publications, our members rank with the best of any class.

It is in the realm of athletics that members of our class have truly excelled all others. No other class in Wake Forest College can claim such a galaxy of athletes as ours. Time and time again this year has it been members of the Law Class that have brought victory after victory to the Demon Deacons.

The Law Class does not claim to have a corner on the genius of the sphere, nor does it boast that its members are a race of supermen in every activity known to man. It is a good average class, unlike all others, as no two classes are alike in personnel, temperament, or ability. But it does claim to have given worthy men to every religious, intellectual, and athletic activity of which the College boasts.

THE MEDICAL CLASS

MEDICAL CLASS HISTORY

THE time has come when our thoughts, deeds, and actions are about to go down as history. Today you witness the leave-taking of the Class of '27 from our beloved college home, and see us about to enter upon the highways of a more strenuous life.

When the Medical Class of '27 was reorganized on September 16, 1925, there were twenty-four members. Seven new men were initiated into the class, including two from Virginia and one from China. This fact within itself shows that the Medical Class of Wake Forest is widely known. Only eighteen have survived to reach the goal, the others having dropped out for various causes. Two others have, however, joined our forces, one of these being a son of Wake Forest, the other having migrated from the great state of Illinois.

We met our first class in the fall of '25. It was Osteology. We found this class just as dry as were the bones we were studying. After having spent four weeks of unique toil on Osteology we entered the dissecting room with fear and trembling. It was here in this room that we spent most of our time working on our cadavers, and it was here, too, that we could often fancy ourselves as one day becoming great physicians and surgeons of the world. Embryology, Histology, Neurology, Physiology, and Physiological Chemistry likewise offered us a considerable amount of entertainment.

As to the second year of medicine, we have not found it as a whole any easier; on the contrary it is in many respects harder, but far more interesting than was the first year.

Our work at Wake Forest has been both hard and boring, yet pleasant and profitable. But we are not through yet—we must remember that we still have years of study and practice before us. Our class is now only in its embryonic stage, so to speak, for our aims, our hopes, our aspirations, and our ideals are far from being materialized. In other words, we might say that our college life here is but a miniature of the great world life beyond. We are proud, however, of the record which our class has made, and can look back with pride on its achievements as a whole.

Some of our classmates have already made some very important discoveries. For instance, one has satisfied himself beyond a doubt that the grooves and impressions in the interior of the cranium are due to the convolutions of the brain rather than to the convulsions of the brain. Another has satisfied his curiosity in ascertaining that the "chick" has no teeth. And a third was jubilant over his discovery of an "external tonsil," but further research has convinced him that this "external tonsil" is a submaxillary gland.

Reviewing these discoveries, we can now realize the fruits of our labors. But let us pause for a moment in the mad rush for glory, and cast a wreath upon the untiring and worthy efforts of an esteemed faculty. They would have us keen of eye, thoughtful of mind, and skilled of fingers. Therefore, as we go out from this institution, let us remember our Alma Mater and treasure her ideals in our memory. This college is a place where men are made. The fruitage of its age must be scholarship, character, and manhood, or its existence becomes a mockery.

Another scene now appears—it is the scene of our departure. The wish of the Class is that we could continue our course side by side. Alas! Fate has decreed our destinies otherwise. Each will depart from here feeling that our moments spent together in the Medical Building are among the happiest of our lives. And as we go thus, with all our getting; get knowledge and remember that:

*"The heights of great men reached and kept,
Were not attained by sudden flight,
But they, while their companions slept,
Were toiling upward in the night."*

THE MINISTERIAL CLASS

MINISTERIAL CLASS HISTORY

UPON no man, since the days of the ancient prophets, has there been bestowed the ability to look into the future and reveal the destiny of man. But for ages past, it has been the custom of our predecessors to record the events of human kind and, thereby, portray to their posterity the dominating characteristics that lead to human success.

It is with this idea in mind that I record the history of the Ministerial Class, with the hope that at some future date, man may turn back the pages of history and be inspired to do greater things.

Since history, in the true sense of the word, is a relation of fact, it is only proper to begin my discourse by stating that the Ministerial Class of Wake Forest College is truly a living organization. There are eighty-four members in the class and each Wednesday night these men, led by their president, Mr. S. L. Lamm, come together and study the books which seem to them essential to the success of their profession. This year Dr. Charles E. Jefferson's book, "The Minister as Shepherd," and Dr. Campbell Morgan's book, "The Minister of the Word," were discussed by Dr. Cullom. These books were found to be of great help to the class, both from the standpoint of enlightenment and as an insight into the real purpose and intent of the ministry itself.

Aside from the regular course of study which the class as a whole pursues, there is another phase of its history that should be mentioned—the College life of the Ministerial Class. There are those of our class who are song birds in the true sense of the word, and their ability to sing has been manifested by their place on the College Glee Club. Others of our number have even summoned up courage enough to present themselves as public speakers and have been awarded positions in the forensic contests of our college. Also, if our records are correct, some of our number have won honors for their Alma Mater in athletics and other activities of the college.

Of the eighty-four men who constitute the class, twenty-two have been ordained, eighteen are active pastors, and several are preparing for missionary work. Their greatest aim is to be of service to mankind; their chief desire to shape their lives by the plan given in the "Book of Books."

When duty calls them to their separate tasks in life they will be ready and prepared.

Organizations

THE first permanent organizations on the campus were the Philomathesian and Euzelian Literary Societies. During the first year those interested in debate formed what was called the "Polemic Society." The leader in their organization was Professor John Armstrong. On February 14, 1835, he addressed the students on "The Value of Polemic Societies." At the close of his address two students, J. C. Dockery of Richmond County, and Hiram K. Person of Chatham County, were appointed to divide the students into two groups equal in talents and numbers. To Armstrong the Societies probably owe their names and constitutions. The first banners, which contained the present designs and cubalistic characters, were presented by Mrs. Samuel Wait on July 4, 1835.

THE GOLDEN BOUGH is an organization which has as its goal the perpetuation at Wake Forest College of the high ideals of Christian character, scholarship, and leadership. Membership is limited to not more than twenty-five students who are selected by a combined vote of the present active membership and the faculty from classes above the first year.

The Golden Bough originated in the spring of 1925. Membership in the Golden Bough is considered as the highest honor the college bestows upon a student, but this honor carries with it an obligation to uphold the best traditions of our Alma Mater.

LITERARY SOCIETIES

PHILOMATHESIAN LITERARY SOCIETY HALL
 THE LITERARY SOCIETIES

By G. W. PASCHAL

THE Philomathesian and Enchan Literary Societies were organized on February 14, 1835, shortly after the beginning of the second session of Wake Forest Institute. At that time the students numbered about seventy. They were divided by lot between the two societies. Mrs. Watt, wife of Dr. Samuel Watt, put the names of each of the students on a piece of paper, jumbled together, and drawn out, half representing one society and half the other.

Great interest was taken in the societies from the first. Soon an intense rivalry had developed. A writer in the Biblical Recorder of September 16, 1835, says:

A very unhappy state of things existed among the students during the latter part of the last term. The two societies absorbed all feelings and all interests. Jealousies arose, then antipathies, and hostilities were carried so far that violent prejudices divided brethren of the same profession. This state of things became quite alarming, and the question frequently occurred, Tantumus caelestibus irae.

An armistice came with the great religious revival of 1835, but throughout the remainder of the nineteenth century the halls of the two societies were much like two armed camps. There was always a latent fight for new members, and many a stratagem to get them. On the occasion of the celebration of Anniversary in 1854, as there were at first only orations, society was clearly pitted against society, and hostilities came out into the open. When, in 1872, the public debate was added, precaution was taken to arrange the speakers so that a member of one society might have as his colleague a member of the other. Under any other arrangement there would have been much more serious battle than one of words.

This rivalry, however, had its better side, and society men of former days have looked upon its weakening as an evidence of decadence. It created and maintained a strong devotion of the members to the societies. Under its influence students would attend long sessions of debate without grumbling, often in the early days, as President Poterak says, sitting through long winter evenings in unheated halls, wrapped in heavy overcoats, and with hot bricks at their feet. Men of the upper classes were faithful to attend, and, as sympathetic critics, lend the advantage of their experience to the training and development of the neophytes.

Another very valuable feature of the societies until recent years was the business meeting. This was a pure democracy. It was here that the character of the men became known. If one was a wackler, he could not conceal it, if he had the qualities of leadership, they soon became manifest, if he was lacking moral fibre, his fellows found it out. One's society mates also knew his financial status; if he had money, they used him with a will where individual expense was involved; if he was a poor fellow struggling to make his way through college, they were lenient, sympathetic, and sometimes able to help him. The society chastened every member with its firm but reasonable discipline, and in the humblest stimulated respect for himself as worthy to be a member of a brotherhood in which every one was set for the improvement of himself and every other. There was a mutual loyalty which was not forgotten outside the society hall.

The first public appearance of the societies was on July 4, 1855. The exercises of that day were in their charge, and the oration was by Mr. James C. Dockery, of the Philomathean Society. At eleven o'clock in the morning the two societies formed in line and marched to the residence of President Wait where now stands the Administration, and received their banners from the hands of Mrs. Wait, who with Dr. Wait and the presidents of the societies, was standing in the balcony so high up that the standard bearers had to be raised on the shoulders of their mates. These banners, probably designed and made by Mrs. Wait, were of silk, the Philomathean white instead of red as at present, the Euzejian blue. As is evident from the speeches of presentation made by Mrs. Wait and the closing paragraph of Mr. Dockery's oration, these banners were already painted with their present symbolical designs, and contained the society mottoes: Estse quam videri malo (Phi), and Intentionem viam aut factum (Eu). Something of the enthusiasm of the occasion may be understood from the following words of the chronicler of the events of the day:

"The banner was then handed to the standard-bearer (Phi); the band played 'Hail Columbia.' The speech, like the silken folds of the banner gracefully waving in the breeze, the countenance of the young men intensely interested; the music, the silent wave of the hat produced a sensation that forced the eyes to glisten with tears."

Until 1854 the societies celebrated their anniversaries each in its own hall. In that year, as has been said, was the first celebration, with orations, one by a representative of each society. With the addition of the public debate in 1872, the celebration has continued unchanged to the present day, except that beginning with 1925 the day was changed to February 1-2. The Society Day, consisting also of a public debate, and orations, about the last of October, was added in 1924. In 1897 was the first inter-collegiate debate. This was in Raleigh with representatives of Trinity College.

The list of the men who have participated in the public functions of the societies is in itself sufficient evidence of the value of society training. It would be hard to make up another list of North Carolinians who have done a more beneficial service to church and state. Among the preachers are White, Prichard, the Dixons, E. M. Poteat; among the lawyers, Covington, Gullory, Merkins; among the statesmen, the Kitchens, Bickett, Webb; among the teachers and college executives, Poteat, Riddick, Sykes. And there are five hundred others.

To the societies is due also the beginning of the College Library. Until the completion of the Heck-Williams Building in 1879, the societies had each its own books on shelves around the walls of its hall on the top floor of the old dormitory building; halls which had been assigned to them on the completion of the building of 1838. On moving to their present halls, the societies donated their books, numbering nearly eight thousand, to the College, and turned over to the College the collection of library fees.

Athletics

THE institution was established upon the mutual labor principle, each student being required to perform a certain amount of manual labor, whether in wielding the hoe or in guiding the plow. In this manner a splendid physique was developed and mental application was more perfectly balanced. This feature was discontinued in 1838.

COACHES

JAMES M. BALDWIN

Big-hearted, likable, and earnest in all his dealings, Coach Baldwin has won the hearts of the Wake Forest student body in the short time he has been a member of the coaching staff of the college. Baldwin believes in going at a thing with all he is worth, and he puts every ounce of his body and soul into everything to which he sets his hand. With such a disposition it is only natural that Coach Baldwin should win the success that has accompanied his first year at Wake Forest. Second place in the North Carolina State football race, and a tie for first honors in basketball, are concrete proof of the worth of the new Wake Forest mentor. Coach Baldwin has had wide experience in coaching before coming here, having coached at such schools as Lehigh University, the University of Maine, Trinity College, and others.

PHIL M. UTLEY

Phil, genial keeper of the gymnasium, assistant coach in football, head coach of Track, and producer of the Special Gymnasium team of the college, is a favorite with all those with whom he comes in contact. He was graduated from Wake Forest College some years ago with a creditable scholarship record behind him, and with one of the most brilliant records on the football, baseball, basketball and track teams of the college of any man ever to finish here. Phil surpassed in all four sports, and never let it get into his head, a remarkable feat for any athlete. And during the four years that he has been back with his Alma Mater he has striven at all times to have Wake Forest on top, and his efforts have not gone unrewarded.

CHARLES LINGLE

Lingle, the new freshman coach, has fitted well into the Baldwin regime during the first year of the reign of the new varsity coach. Lingle comes to Wake Forest from Lehigh University, where as a student and a post-graduate, he won honors such as are read of in college novels. Dashing through the entire University of West Virginia football team for an eighty-five-yard run and victory for Lehigh are among his accomplishments. He handled the varsity basketball team at Lehigh during the 1926 season, leading one of the greatest teams in Lehigh history through the season with but one defeat. Lingle is a hard and conscientious worker, and is destined to success with his work of handling the Wake Forest freshman teams.

ALMA MATER

Oh, Alma Mater, 'tis thy name
 That lights our path to glory;
 We'll ever spread thy matchless fame
 In word and song and story.
 So sound her name thru all the land,
 Let triumphs ring on every hand,
 And praises all our hearts command.
 Hail, Hail, to thee, Wake Forest.

And with true hearts we'll greet the hour
 That calls us to our duty;
 We'll trust our Alma Mater's power
 To round our lives with beauty.
 And all the while our hearts are free,
 Our souls are full of jolity,
 And singing in their joy and glee:
 Hail, Hail, to thee, Wake Forest.

Her sturdy sons from far and near
 Look back to Alma Mater;
 With many a prayer but ne'er a fear
 They bless their Alma Mater.
 And as they rise from height to height
 And stand as victors in the fight,
 They sing the mother of their might:
 Hail, Hail, to thee, Wake Forest.

FOOTBALL INDIVIDUALS

CAPTAIN RACKLEY

Playing his fourth year as quarterback and leader of the Demon Deacons, Blainey Rackley was again recognized as North Carolina's premier field general and was for the third consecutive year selected unanimously as quartermaster of the mythical All-State elevens chosen by sports writers throughout the State. Rackley's work was outstanding in every game of the season, and his feats on the gridiron for Wake Forest will long be remembered.

BILL RILEY

With the close of the 1926 football season came also the culmination of the football career of this pictured giant of the gridiron, one William S. Riley, of Albany, Georgia. Bill is not as giant in size, tipping the beam at only 150 pounds; but in his achievements for Wake Forest during the past four years, he has been one of the most brilliant of the Deacons. The unanimous selection of sport scribes for their All-State teams, Riley won for himself a name such as is seldom earned in this part of the country.

FRED EMMERSON

In this powerful tackle Wake Forest had one of the most brilliant linemen in the South. Emmerson was picked on every consequential All-State team chosen for the year and was named on one All-Southern team. The big Kansan began his career here at the center position but was later shifted to one of the tackles, at which position he has rendered consistent service for the past three seasons.

"MONK" OBER

This hard-hitting halfback from Fort Scott, Kansas, picked as Rackley's running mate on a number of All-State teams, was perhaps Wake Forest's best and most consistent ground-gainer during the 1926 season. Ober's good work was recognized by his team-mates and he was elected by the team to captain the 1927 eleven.

FOOTBALL INDIVIDUALS

PAUL SYKES

And this is that 150-pound specimen of grit and pluck that represented the fullback department of Wake Forest's 1926 grid machine. Paul has for three years prior to this one been a mainstay in the reserve corps of the Deacon football squadron, putting in practically all of the 1925 season as a regular. Sykes is also an excellent scholar and is president of the Senior class.

JESSE PHIFER

Jesse Phifer, by winning for himself a regular berth at center on Coach Baldwin's team, has won the honor and esteem of the Wake Forest student body, as well as of North Carolina fandom in general. Phifer, a sophomore, and weighing but 150 pounds, by sheer determination and power of will, showed the Deacon coach that weight was by no means a required attribute of a good linesman.

JACK PHELPS

"Phoebe," Fred Emmerson's running mate as one of the tackles on Wake Forest's 1926 grid machine, received Southwide recognition as one of the best guards in the section. Phelps, with his giant structure, played havoc with his opponents this year, and gives promise of being one of the mainstays in Wake Forest's 1927 team. Jack has all the qualities that go into the makeup of a real football player and a man.

JOE CLAYTON

On the other side of the line from the veteran Riley resided this jovial junior from Brevard. It took Joe some time to prove that he was the man for the job, but when he did win the position there was none to gainsay his right to it. His speed, together with an uncanny ability to gather passes from the air assure him of a place on the 1927 team.

FOOTBALL INDIVIDUALS

HAL WEIR

Hal Weir, sophomore, and a product of Asheville High, was one of the most valuable players on Wake Forest's squad. Weir filled one of the guard positions on the team and was chosen on a number of mythical All-State teams. The speed that won him one of the flank positions on Bob Hays' freshman eleven of 1925, joined hands with the weight and power that characterized his high school ball, and gave to Wake Forest a real guard.

CHARLES CHAKALES

Again Asheville is heard from! This time it is Charlie Chakales, a stocky Greek that is the holy terror of any who may be in the way when he gets the ball. Chakales has served Wake Forest long and well, but this year he really struck his stride and gave any other aspiring backs a target to shoot at. Chakales will be back for service next year.

LUTHER PERSON

This raw-boned tackle hailing from Fayetteville won the hearts of Wake Forest students and supporters last year with his hearty and energetic playing. Again this year he showed his mettle, and was rewarded for his pains by a regular berth on Baldwin's team. "Luke," always to be depended upon in a pinch, fought his way to glory on many fields during the 1926 season. A bad knee hindered his playing considerably.

RALPH JAMES

Having won the reputation as being the best passer in the State, Ralph was not destined to lose any of his glory during the 1926 season. His unerring accuracy in hurling the ball scored many touchdowns for Wake Forest this year and gave James the jump on other contestants for the quarterback position made vacant by the graduation of Rackley. For three years now this Ashevilleian has served well in his capacity as understudy for the great Rackley.

FOOTBALL INDIVIDUALS

LOUIS WOODWARD

Woodward's clean sportsmanship and high moral code on the football field have set his name high on the pinnacle of Wake Forest athletics of all times. Doing second duty on the pivot position of the Wake Forest eleven, Woodward was one of the big factors in the many triumphs of the Deacon eleven during the season. Although eligible for another year on the Wake Forest team, it is doubtful that he will be back next year.

VERNELL HACKNEY

Hackney, another sophomore member of Coach Baldwin's 1926 football squad, caught the eye of the Wake Forest mentor during the first workouts of the season, and saw considerable service during the year. Vernell showed up exceptionally well in the Duke game, also distinguishing himself in the Elon game. Hackney did not win a letter this year, but should have no difficulty in rating a good place on the 1927 squad.

"JEW" ZIMMERMAN

And again, a raw-boned recruit from Asheville. "Jew," a gigantic power of strength in the line, was used to advantage by Coach Baldwin in a number of games. Zimmerman is another sophomore and is expected to exhibit some real football ability in the next two years. Aside from being a football player of merit, Zimmerman also has won for himself an enviable reputation for holding the gate at basketball games.

BILL MEEKINS

Faithful and hard-working, Bill Meekins played an important role in the drama of Wake Forest's 1926 football team. Bill completed his academic work here with the close of the first semester, and therefore will not be back for the 1927 squad. Although not a regular, Bill was always on hand when needed, and served Coach Baldwin well in the production of the 1926 aggregation.

FOOTBALL INDIVIDUALS

WILLIE MOSS

J. Willie Moss, brother of the well remembered Tom Moss, of a few years, began his career on the Wake Forest College football squad with the 1926 season. Young Moss is a plunging fullback of no mean ability, and the years are expected to bring him out. Playing steady ball throughout the season, Willie served his Alma Mater well in the games in which he figured. He is a sophomore, and is good for two more years on the Deacon varsity.

SEATON HOLT

Another member of the Wake Forest football squad hailing from Durham. Holt completed his career on the Deacon football team with the 1926 football season. The past year was perhaps the most successful of all for the Bull City youth. He distinguished himself in the Elon game by snatching down two passes and turning them into touchdowns. Hard-working and earnest, Holt deserved the letter that was given him following the 1926 season.

MEAD CONNELLY

"Bud" Connelly, for years a lowly linesman, impressed Coach Baldwin this year with his possibilities as a fullback, and was consequently shifted to this position about mid-season. Playing behind the line for the first time in his life, Connelly made a favorable impression on the Wake Forest students and followers, and will in all probability be used in this capacity next season. Connelly has two more years in the Deacon varsity.

ED STALLINGS

After remaining out of college for a year Stallings returned here this season and showed a vast improvement in his football playing ability. He was used in several games this year and showed up to a decided advantage on each occasion. Stallings applies his stocky person to plugging the lines of opposing teams, and does a very good job of it. He is also a versatile baseball player.

REVIEW OF THE WAKE FOREST COLLEGE 1926 FOOTBALL SEASON

IT was on a hot Monday early in September that the thirty-three prospective members of Coach Baldwin's 1926 football machine first lined up for calisthenics on Gore Field. It was a rather skeptical bunch, taken aggregately, replete with knowledge gleaned from another system of play, and desirous of being shown that any system could compare with the one which they had been laboring for three years prior to this. Coach Baldwin, the coach who was to replace the successful "Hank" Garrity, was confronted with such a task as rarely ever faces any mentor, either new or old.

The problem was this. Wake Forest College, so long used to losing athletic teams, had in 1923, procured the services of the aforementioned Garrity, together with a promising bunch of material, and had, before the football season was over, developed the best team in the State, and had succeeded in winning second honors in the State after having, through force of habit, dropped the first game of the year to the Tar Heels of the University of North Carolina. It was the event of the birth of a new athletic regime at Wake Forest College, and at the same time the event of the lath of a new sense of expectation from Wake Forest's supporters. Accustomed for so many years to losing games right and left, and to considering it a "moral victory" when the team fought Guilford to a nothing-nothing deadlock, Wake Forest students and followers found surprisingly little difficulty in completely revising the standards by which they judged their teams, and where a year ago they considered the team fortunate to defeat Elon 6-0, they now thought themselves ill-used if the team didn't pile at least fifty or sixty points against these same Christians.

And so it went. Garrity's regime was colorful, brilliant and successful, and there were among Wake Forest's student body many "doubting Thomases" and many who would not believe in the new Deacon mentor, Baldwin, until he should have proven by concrete example, that he was capable of putting out a winning team. There were even athletes who openly flouted the new system.

So much for the problem. It is self-explanatory. Baldwin, a new man, working with new men, dealing with new problems, and attempting to introduce a new system, found that the Wake Forest student body didn't want to wait a year or two for the new regime to begin to function; they wanted a winning team right off the bat. Wake Forest's teams had been winning, they argued. Why then, could they not continue to win?

And the story of how Baldwin, the big hearted, lovable giant that is now loyally looked up to by every Wake Forest College student, solved this problem is one of the classics of sportdom.

It didn't take the prospective players long to find out that whatever fault might have been found with their new boss, one of them was not that he had any favorites, or that he was giving away gratis any positions on an athletic team coached by him. It didn't take the thirty-three men already referred to long to learn that it were to win places on a Baldwin-coached eleven they must work. And so they worked—worked for six and eight hours each day. Whether or not Coach Baldwin realized the ponderosity of the task that confronted him, there is no doubt that he extracted every possible bit of brain-work and physical toil from the men that reported to him. At six-thirty every morning the thirty-three were on deck at Gore Field for a two-hour before breakfast workout. And then, at eleven o'clock, the motley crew assembled again, this time on the campus, for an hour's skull drill and black-board lectures by Coach Baldwin. Following lunch, the squad met again on the campus for more skull drill before the regular afternoon's work on the field commencing at three-thirty. And, to cap the climax, another meeting was called after supper in the Law class room.

And so, after three weeks of this type of training, the Deacons found themselves at last ready for the trying clash with the University of North Carolina. For the two seasons prior to this one the Demons had vanquished the Tar Heels, and, by all good logic, should have been satisfied. But no, not Wake Forest. On Friday night, September 24, Wake Forest was keyed up to just as high pitch as ever, and the desire for victory was running just as high. Coach Baldwin and his new system were forgotten for the moment. Victory was the only thing. Little did it matter to the seven hundred Wake Forest students that their coach had had only three weeks in which to inject an entirely new system of play into the men that were to represent the college Saturday, and even less did it matter to the thousands of Wake Forest backers over the State and country. Victory, and blood! They were the crew.

And then, after seeming ages, the time came. It was two-thirty on Gore Field. Up the red hill to the college was a steady stream of sport-mad humanity. Wake Forest's bleachers were filled to overflowing; and on they came, those heartless thousands. And then came the teams. Carolina, with her haughty blue, and Wake Forest, bedecked in sombre Old Gold and Black.

And then the game! Never, according to Wake Forest fans who yelled themselves hoarse all through that hectic struggle, has there been such a soul-strainer. As the game started, the Tar Heels presented a flashing end run combination that looked not at all favorable for Wake Forest. In three plays the Heels had gained some thirty-five yards of Wake Forest's precious territory, and had been credited with three first downs. It was here, however, that the Baldwin-coached men dug their cleats in the ground and showed a defensive power that forced the Heels to punt.

And here the tide turned. From then on it was Wake Forest's game, with the scoring coming as a matter of course. It was early in the second quarter that this improvement first made its dent in the score board. After Laurence Cooper had fallen on a Carolina fumble on the Heels' 20-yard line, Captain Rackley shot a bullet-like pass straight into the arms of the spinning Riley, who trotted across the Carolina goal line for the first score of the game. Rackley failed to make good the try for the extra point.

It was later in this same period that the Deacons dashed for the second time across the Blue goal line for the points that put the game on ice for Wake Forest. With the ball on Carolina's 30-yard line Rackley passed another of his beautiful aerial thrusts to "Monk" Ober, who carried the ball twenty-six yards to Carolina's four-yard mark before being downed. Another perfectly timed pass, Rackley to Riley, netted another touchdown, and victory the victory for which so many Wake Forest backers had yelled so long and well.

And after the game there was among the thousands that thronged up the hill a sun-tanned, rather bald middle-aged man who had scored the greatest victory of all. That man was Jim Baldwin, the man who had seen what was expected of him, and had, by an almost superhuman effort, produced that thing.

On the following Saturday the Deacons journeyed to Salisbury to do battle with the Terriers of Wofford college. The Deacons ripped great holes in Wofford's line and toward passed their way to a 27-0 victory over the South Carolinians. Two touchdowns came in the first quarter as results of long drives down the field. "Monk" Ober made both the first touchdowns, James adding one of the extra points. In the second period Riley added another touchdown to his credit when he brought down a twenty-five yard pass from James and raced thirty yards for a touchdown. The Deacon second team was injected into the fray for the third quarter, fighting the Terriers on even terms for fifteen minutes. The first team was reejected for the fourth period. Just before the final whistle blew, with the ball in Wake Forest's possession on Wofford's 80-yard mark, James stepped back and coolly passed twenty-five yards to Riley, who clipped off the remaining forty-five yards to score another touchdown just as the whistle blew.

On October 9, the Deacon Deacons again pitted their strength against a South Carolina eleven, but with not the success that accompanied them in the Wofford game the week before. Furman's Purple Hurricane furnished the opposition this week, the game being staged on Furman territory in Greenville, S. C. In a game that had about it all the earmarks of one of the classical Northern or Western intersectional clashes, the North and South Carolina Baptists fought for three periods to a 0-0 tie. It was not until the fourth quarter that the Hurricane, led by the valiant "Red" Schneider, marched through the Deacons for a 10-0 victory.

The first three periods were played on almost equal terms, with the ball in Furman territory during most of the forty-five minutes. In these periods the Deacons exhibited the best line-plugging ability they have shown this year, at one time carrying the ball in one fell swoop from their own 40-yard mark to Furman's 15-yard mark. The fourth quarter, however, saw the Purple Hurricane turn the wrong way for Wake Forest backers. The Wake Forest line, invincible for three quarters, weakened, and in five minutes the Hurricane had swept through the golden clad warriors for ten points and victory.

Once again, on the following Saturday, Coach Baldwin led his men against a South Carolina eleven. Asheville was the scene of this third successive clash with a Palmetto State team, and Presbyterian College was the opposing team. By this time Wake Forest's ranks had been considerably thinned by injuries and sickness. First, in the Carolina game, Paul Sykes received an injury that taboed him from the fray for at least three or four weeks. Then, in the Wofford contest, Captain Rackley received an ankle injury that was to render him useless to the team for an indefinite length of time. Then came Jack Smith's time to eat dirt, and the Deacons had lost another star. And now, just on the eve of the P. C. game, Bill Gibson turned up with diphtheria.

With their ranks thus so distressingly torn asunder, it was not a great surprise to Wake Forest followers so that Saturday in Asheville when Wake Forest's machine, patched as it was, cracked before the scrapping Presbyterians and fell to a 13-0 defeat before the South Carolinians.

It was the Davidson contest in Charlotte the following week that really mattered, however, and every effort was put forth by Coach Baldwin and other Wake Forest officials to get the Baptist team in condition to put up a real scrap against the North Carolina Presbyterians. Rackley was finally patched up and gotten into shape to play at least a part of the game. With their captain thus able to play only half as he was wont to play, the Deacons fought bravely and valiantly against the well-trained Davidson crew. Davidson was leading, 3-0 at the half, after having been outplayed by the Deacons. Captain Rackley evened the count in the third quarter, however, to tie the score at 3-3. Although both teams scrapped valiantly for the remainder of the game, neither was able to break the deadlock, and the final score was a tie.

Duke University, another denominational school, faced Wake Forest next. The Deacons were in top form for this clash and the final 21-0 victory for Wake Forest was deserved. Captain Rackley, a Goldsboro boy, rose to the heights in this contest, fairly dazzling his hometfolks with a series of end runs, line bucks, and passes. Ober, Clayton, and Hackney scored the touchdowns of the game, Rackley adding all three extra points. This game found the team in its first excellent physical condition since the game with the Tar Heels back in September.

Elon came next on Wake Forest's program, and was easily dispeised with. The Deacons piled a total of 53 points representing eight touchdowns by six Demons. Elon was outclassed from the beginning, being able to account for only two first downs as against eighteen for Wake Forest. Vernell Hackney and Mead Connelly, both of Greensboro, came into the limelight in this game. Hackney stepped off a 70-yard run for a touchdown in the third quarter, and Connelly, who had prior to this game played in the line ploughed his way through the Christian defense for numerous long gains and for one touchdown.

The Deacons returned to the realm of "moral victories" in the next game, the one with the Indians of William and Mary, played at Norfolk. The Indians were forced to their utmost to rout the Baptists, and it was Wallick's 85-yard sprint from a kick-off that gave the Indians the one touchdown margin that spelled victory. Wake Forest clearly outplayed the Indians in two periods, outclassed them in one, and fought to a standstill in all but five minutes of play in the other, and received constant applause for the great game it displayed. Rackley and Riley featured Wake Forest's game, while the whole Deacon crew exhibited rare football.

Returning home for another engagement before the game with North Carolina State at Raleigh, the Deacons had it all their way with the Quakers of Guilford College. Coach Baldwin's second and third string teams played a large part of the time, but even with this Wake Forest was able to chalk up a 60-0 shutout before the final whistle could stop things.

The final game of the season found Wake Forest and Davidson deadlocked for high honors. Each team had won each game on its schedule except the Wake Forest-Davidson clash which had resulted in a tie. On Thanksgiving Day then, with Wake Forest and Davidson battling State and Duke, respectively, there hung the 1926 State Championship of North Carolina. If Wake Forest defeated State and Davidson defeated Duke, the title would lie between Wake Forest and Davidson. If either Wake Forest or Davidson should lose, however, and the other should win, that winner should be champion of the State. Thus stood the race at two-thirty on Thanksgiving Day afternoon. How it stood at five-thirty on that same afternoon is another story, and to make that story—a long one—short, Wake Forest for the second consecutive year allowed the Wolfpack to win, and Davidson, defeating Duke easily, rose promptly to the throne.

The State game was a disappointment to Wake Forest followers, a bitter one, but in looking back over the season and reviewing it as a whole, it is easy to see that Coach Baldwin did wonders with his team, and that Wake Forest was during the 1926 football season breaking ground for a new and better athletic regime.

BASKETBALL INDIVIDUALS

OBER, Guard

Having been captain for two years automatically speaks for 'Monk's' ability. As running guard he is clever, fast, and dribbles and handles the ball with great skill. It is outstanding to note that he works for his team unselfishly as he seldom shoots but passes much. This would be an appropriate slogan for 'Monk': "When in doubt pass."

DOWTIN, Forward

The very fact that "Bob" Downtin was high scorer for the whole State during the past season is proof enough of his wonderful ability as a Deacon tosser. He scored 170 points for Wake Forest himself. His playing was always dependable and sensational. Downtin hails from Asheville.

EMERSON, Center

Fred is a congenial, hard-working, and intelligent player. He knows how to play and when to play, and knowing the game from A to Z, he is a great asset to the team. "Cowboy" is a smooth player and a sure shot—but don't forget his defensive playing and his ability to fake the opposition. His prowess, knowledge, good training and reputation spell his future. Let's hope for another "Cowboy."

JAMES, Forward

James was next to the highest scorer in the State during the past season. His consistent playing as varsity forward made him one of the most valuable men on the Deacon quint. He is a fast player and an accurate shooter. Asheville claims James as a native son.

OWEN, Guard

"Bob" Owen graduated from last year's frosh squad with an enviable record among all the guards of state teams. He was Baldin's choice as Ober's mate over two-letter men from last year's squad. "Bob" is a hard fighter, an aggressive and consistent player. We believe him All-State material next year.

CARTER, Forward

This scrappy little forward from "the land of the sky" was the pride of the reserves this season. He was Baldin's first "sub" in the big games, and his clever work with the "Big Five" showed him worthy of the "W" he won this season. "Glee" has two more years to play.

BASKETBALL INDIVIDUALS

WIER, Guard

"Butts," regular guard on last year's freshmen team, was a valuable man on the Deacon squad this season. He could always be counted on for a good game at the guard station. He was noted for his fighting spirit, whether he was in the game or on the bench. He comes to us from Asheville.

PASCHAL, Forward

George was Downtin's running mate on that little Deacon outfit last year, and was spotted as varsity material. This year, under Baldin's coaching, "Pas" came through with the "good" and proved himself to be one of the most consistent men on the reserve force.

VICKERS, Guard

Vickers is the snappy little guard of the reserve. His knowledge of the game, his speed and his accuracy made him a terror in the eyes of the opponents when reserve force was to be reckoned with. He had plenty of the fighting spirit that characterized the whole Deacon squad. His home is at Durham.

FURCHES, Guard

Although Furches was not a first string man he deserves credit for being one of Baldin's crew of twelve. He helped give the competition that built the strongest team in the State. Frank's sincerity in all that he does makes him command the respect of all the students that he comes in contact with.

POOVEY

Poovey has made a creditable record as a member of the Deacon squad. Throughout the season he demonstrated a fighting spirit that is characteristic of him. His determination has been marked. He is worthy of commendation for his consistent work. His graceful floor-work has especially been recognized. He lives at Hickory.

WOODWARD, Center

Louis Woodward proved to be a very valuable man on the squad this season. He was always dependable. His accuracy in shooting and his skillful floor work made him a dangerous opponent for the strong teams against which the Deacon tossers were pitted. Statesville claims Woodward.

RÉSUMÉ OF SEASON

WAKE FOREST started the 1927 basketball season with the best prospects enjoyed by a Demon Deacon team for many years. With three regular varsity men back, and with plenty of good material from the ranks of the 1926 freshman team, Wake Forest supporters were confident that Coach Baldwin could organize another team of "Demons" which, when turned loose, would set other teams in the state an interesting pace for inter-collegiate honors.

As all Wake Forest students would have it, the first seven games on the schedule were played at home, and in each of the games Wake Forest saw her heroes of the court bring honor to the name of the college. Even in the first exhibition game with Durham "Y." sport enthusiasts were assured that Coach Baldwin had whipped into shape an aggregation that was not to be trifled with.

A prettier team was not to be found in North Carolina than this Demon Deacon squad, when, upon the night of February 12, it handed to the Red Terrors of N. C. State College her first licking of the season. The Deacons, clad in flashy new uniforms, worked together with almost faultless precision. It was Captain Ober's field goal in the last few seconds of play that cinched the game for Wake Forest.

Again on the following Tuesday night, Wake Forest was put to the supreme test, and again she showed State College the stuff of which winners are made. It was in the extra period of this game that Doetin looped in a beautiful shot from the center of the court, and again Wake Forest was the winner.

Of course, after these two wins over State, the 1927 Wake Forest basketball team was pronounced a splendid success, but the season was not yet over. After overwhelming Duke, the Deacons journeyed over to Chapel Hill to engage in battle with the 1926 Southern champions. Early in the second half the Deacons overtook the lead enjoyed by the Tar Heels at the turn, and when the final whistle blew the wearers of Old Gold and Black had accomplished what was thought beforehand to be an impossible task, and had turned back in defeat the haughty Tar Heels. Here at Wake Forest there was incessant rejoicing for weeks. With two wins over State and one over Carolina, Wake Forest students came to treasure aspiring thoughts for their Deacons.

Following the engagement with Carolina the team took a trip through Western North Carolina, winning every game. Then the Deacons sallied down into South Carolina and for the first time in the season tasted defeat. It was Furman University that punctured Wake Forest's winning streak of fifteen games. There followed two games with the Durham "Y" quint. In the second of these Wake Forest amassed a total of sixty-nine points, the largest score to be piled by a North Carolina quint during the 1927 season.

Wake Forest's second defeat of the season came at the hands of Carolina in the City Auditorium at Raleigh. The State Championship rested upon this game, so a record-breaking crowd was attracted. With Carolina's victory came a deadlock for high honors in the state, with Wake Forest and the University sharing the top perch. Tentative plans for a game to settle the championship did not materialize.

Coach Baldwin now took his charges on a short, but interesting trip into Virginia. Of the three games played on the tour, Wake Forest won two. The game lost was to the Richmond "Y," Deacon subs playing a large part of the game.

It has been many, many years, if ever, that Wake Forest has had such a basketball team as the one that represented the college during the 1927 season. With all the members starring and with none striving for individual honors, a very co-ordinate unit was formed. Much praise is due Coach Baldwin for his work in producing this team. In this, his first year at Wake Forest, he has caused to be manifested in football and basketball more interest than has been shown for a long time. True, he has had good material to work with, but the work of his teams showed that there was a compelling force always present behind the works.

A general summary at the close of the season showed just what Wake Forest has done and just what was Wake Forest's claim for State honors. Wake Forest scored 963 points against 643 for opposing teams. Of the twenty-four games on her card, Wake Forest won twenty-one. Of the twelve games played in the state, only one was lost; thus the Deacons tied Carolina for first place in the race. Wake Forest also made an enviable record in individual high scoring honors in the state. Al Downtin forged ahead of James near the close of the season and annexed a total of 271 points, a record for the state. James, with 240 points, was second, both on the team and in the state, while Emmerson took third place in the state with 187 points. It is indeed remarkable that Wake Forest should produce all three of the trio of high scorers in the state.

The first team was composed of Downtin, James, Emmerson, Ober (Captain), and Owen. As reserve material there were: Carter, Paschal, Furches, Woodward, Weir, Vickers, and Poovey. Captain Ober, playing his last year on the Deacon team, displayed his usual fast form and capable generalship, while his team was on the floor. Possibly the fastest man on the floor was Downtin, whose accuracy at the goal played a large part in many of Wake Forest's victories. James, playing at the other forward position, was one of the flashiest men in the state. His coolness and ability have won for him the captainship of the 1928 team. Emmerson, the husky Kansan, was always true to his position at center. He was in the center of every play made by his team, both on the offensive and defensive.

Owen, a rookie guard, is regarded as the find of the season. Coming up from the freshman team of 1926, he fitted admirably into the Deacon varsity and made an excellent running mate for Ober. Carter made an admirable first forward substitute, and was always in the thick of the fray while he was in the game. Other members of the squad, while not playing regularly, were of inestimable value to the varsity.

CAPTAIN W. S. RILEY
Baseball

MANAGER B. D. THOMAS
Baseball

BILL RILEY

Bill Riley, Captain-elect of the 1927 Demon Deacon baseball team, is concluding his brilliant athletic career at Wake Forest. Riley was an important cog in the State Championship baseball team of last season, and is looking even better this year. Riley is one of those athletes who improve from their freshman year on.

KEY JOYNER

One of the steadiest, and at the same time most brilliant, is Key Joyner. Taking after Sorrell in form as well as in looks, Joyner has won many games for Wake Forest and is expected to win many another before his career is ended. With Sorrell gone, Key will be the backbone of the Wake Forest pitching staff this year.

JACK "PHOEBE" PHELPS

Jack is "a power in this world" on the baseball team as well as on the gridiron. Holding down the backstop position on the Deacon team for two consecutive years requires a lot of stuff, but this mighty giant from Creswell has what it takes. His hitting was a big factor in Wake Forest's State Championship team of last year.

JOE CLAYTON

A flashy, daring shortstop, Joe Clayton has reminded old-timers many times since his stay here of the Vann Stringfield of four years ago; Joe is this season playing his second year as a regular on the Demon Deacon varsity baseball team. Joe intends to make teaching and coaching his profession after leaving school, it is said. His teams will be successful ones if he instills in them his spirit and fight.

SEATON HOLT

One of the hardest hitting outfielders in the state, Holt has made for Wake Forest one of the most valuable players on the squad. Holt is a steady, capable fielder, and is not capable of being praised too highly. He is back this year at his old berth in left field, and bids fair to even outshine his work of last season.

RALPH JAMES

James made his official debut in the realm of Wake Forest baseball in the spring of 1925 when he was a member of the freshman nine. In a post season tilt between the Deacon varsity and the yearlings, both of which aggregations were State Champs, this Asheville youth hurled his way to fame by trouncing the Demon Deacon varsity. This year James is playing his second year on the varsity.

PETE JOYNER

Little Pete is not handicapped at all on the baseball diamond by his tiny physique. Indeed, one witnessing one of his pegs from the hot corner to first base would be tempted to think that if he were much larger his strength would be too great to throw a ball less than a mile or so. Pete is one of the veterans on the Wake Forest team.

OT PERSON

This is the man who was the hero of Wake Forest's 1926 baseball season, and who is doing more good work this year as a member of the Demon Deacon squad. Just before the Carolina game at Pinehurst last year, the jinx had Wake Forest in a tight predicament. Two of the Wake Forest hurlers were ruled ineligible, while other members of the staff were out with injuries. Ot stepped in and won the game for Wake Forest, poling out a home run as well as pitching a beautiful game.

KID KITCHIN

Kid has long ago proved his mettle in counter attacks on State opponents. Not one rival in the state diamond artists but fear that left-hand twirl which he is master of. He shows by every delivery that he has perfect control of the stuff which spells victory for his team.

FRANK FURCHES

Furches is another new member of the Demon Deacon baseball team this season. One of the most powerful hitters on Bob Hays' championship team of last year, he had little difficulty in landing a berth on Baldwin's first string this year. Frank is a hard aggressive player, sure as fate in the field, and a wonder at the bat.

"POP" SIMMONS

"Pop" is a member of that old, but dignified school of baseball pitchers that take things easy and don't believe in allowing his fielders to grow cold while he is in the box. "Pop" lets 'em hit them, but the hits are usually directed toward the occupied portion of the field, with the result that this veteran has many games to his credit. Simmons' athletic career with the college concludes this year.

AL DOWTIN

Downtin, recognized as one of the greatest basketball players ever to be turned loose on a North Carolina court, is equally as rampant when it comes to the baseball diamond. Al was a member of Bob Hays' State Championship baseball team last year, and seems assured of a berth as second baseman on the varsity this year.

AYDEN LASSITER

Lassiter is the third member of Baldwin's 1927 Demon Deacon squad who is a graduate of last year's frosh team, and it looks like that he will be able to make the grade with the best of the veterans. Lassiter is in right field this year and is as sure in his position as is Furches in his.

KUYKENDALL

This premier backstop, another product of the prolific Asheville, has made an auspicious beginning to his work on Coach Baldwin's varsity. "Kirk" was last year a member of Bob Hays' State Championship freshman team, and his work this year bids fair to come well up to the standard set last year as a first year man. "Kirk" is dependable behind the bat, and is a terror to opposing hurlers.

MOTSINGER

When deep center is in need of one who knows how to gage the flying sphere, "Mot" will fill all requirements. The winning of his letter long ago proves that he is worthy of all consideration. Too, when the batting average of the team is falling below par, this centerfield master gets his lucky stroke.

"DOC" HIGHTOWER

"Doc" is one of those who has risen from the bottom of the ladder to a perch enviably near the top. He failed to make the freshman team last year, but in his work as a sophomore member of Coach Baldwin's team this year he has shown baseball ability that should carry him far in the remaining two years of his career here. "Doc" is an infielder.

Varsity Track Squad

1927 VARSITY TRACK REVIEW

THE past track season was without doubt the most successful in the history of this sport at Wake Forest College. Never before has such enthusiasm and interest been manifested.

The initial call for candidates was responded to by approximately sixty-five men. In every event of the sport there was much competition for berths. Only after a very extended elimination process and very severe tryouts was it possible to select the final representatives of the varsity and freshmen teams. Heretofore practically every man reporting for practice automatically secured a place. This year it was a case of the survival of the fittest. A few of last year's letter men and heroes were absent; however, there were a great many new faces willing to fill the shoes of those which were found missing. Equally characteristic of both the varsity and freshmen teams was the fact that each phase of the sport was well-rounded. Talent seemed well distributed in all of the track and field events. For once Wake Forest boasted of a well-balanced team.

Soon after the practice season began, Coach Utley, with his characteristic aggressiveness, whipped into shape a team which Wake Forest was proud to have support her colors. Arthur Greene was selected as captain of the cinder path artists and this fleet mid-distance runner led the team in great style.

Some of the outstanding runners on the team were: Greene, Rackley, Daniel, Richmond, Hawes, Flanagan, Cook, Henry, Bryan, McBee, Woodward, Collier, Stradley, Holliday, Powell, Cree, and Cox. No doubt the reconstruction of the track and the utilization of much new equipment were important factors in the development of the smooth-running machine. The most notable addition to the track was a new 220-yard straight-a-way. This new feature proved to be a decided advantage to the sprinters and hurdlers. The elimination of the curve in the 220-yard dashes made possible the attainment of better time in these events.

Another forward step toward early development of our efficient team was the separation of the varsity and the freshmen into two teams. Heretofore the freshmen runners have been allowed to participate in all varsity meets other than those held under Southern Conference rules, but this season it was thought best to arrange for a freshman team. This affords an opportunity for a greater number of the first-year men to prove their mettle, because, under such a system they do not have to compete with the strong opposition of the varsity men for berths and receive more individual attention.

The schedule marked out by Manager Williams was as follows:

April 12—Duke University at Durham.

April 16—Hampden-Sidney College at Hampden-Sidney, Va.

April 23—Davidson College at Davidson.

April 30—William and Mary College at Wake Forest.

May 6 and 7—All-State Meet at Greensboro.

May 13 and 14—South Atlantic Meet at Richmond.

In all these meets the Wake Forest team showed up well and made an enviable record for the college. The freshman team met several freshman and high school teams and was likewise successful in making a creditable showing.

VARSITY TENNIS SQUAD, 1927

VARSITY TENNIS REVIEW OF 1926

THE tennis team of '26 had a very successful season, winning six matches, tying one, and losing three. The first double team, composed of Captain Powers and J. B. Sawyer, lost only two matches. These matches were during the early part of the season, and during the last part of the season the Deacon pair were victors over the team which conquered them. (The Duke team and the team from the University of North Carolina are the ones referred to.) Captain Powers was the star player for the Deacons, winning all of his single matches except the ones against the present State champions. The State champion of '25 was among the scalps of the Deacon captain.

The team of '26 was composed of Powers, captain; Sawyer, Agelasto, Slate, Burroughs, and Tom Carlton. Carlton won all the matches he played.

Captain Powers is the only member of last year's team back for the '27 team. He will assume the captaincy again this year. The most promising men for the team are: Padgett, Epstein, Hall, Yates, and Maxwell. The team will meet the teams from the other colleges of this state and trips are being arranged into South Carolina and Virginia.

Sponsors

*I*n the early days very little opportunity for social relations with young women was given the students of Wake Forest. They were allowed to have them as their guests at their Fourth of July celebration but these were almost the sole occasions for companionship among them. With the exception of an occasional visitor, the only young lady on the premises was the daughter of the President, and with her from the very first year, although she was a mere child, the young gentlemen were desperately in love.

The Center Wedge of North Carolina's March of Progress

Honorable Angus W. McLean, Governor of North Carolina, in a letter to the editor of Manufacturers Record says, "In all the development of North Carolina, electrical energy has had a major share."

In the centuries past industries have located at sources of power, necessitating the importation of labor and materials.

Today, industry locates at the source of materials, where climate is desirable and land and labor are cheap, and efficient public utilities transmit the power to their door.

North Carolina, being served by the vast super-power system of the Southeast, is able to realize on its extensive resources of materials, labor and unexcelled year around climate.

A LOVELY SCENE

We stood at the bars as the sun went down
Beneath the hills on a summer day;
Her eyes were tender and big and brown,
Her breath as sweet as the new-mown hay.

Far from the west the faint sunshine
Glanced sparkling off her golden hair;
Those calm, deep eyes were turned to mine,
And a look of contentment rested there.

I see her bathed in sunlight flood,
I see her standing peacefully now,
Peacefully standing and chewing her cud,
As I rubbed her ears—that Jersey cow!
